Draft to Take Men in 25 To 22 Year Bracket First

But Youths 19-21 Will Comprise Bulk Of Draftees Later, Hershey States

By The Associated Press

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey said yesterday men will be drafted by age groups, with men 25 down through 22 taken first in the initial six months of the program.

It was indicated clearly that although men of this age bracket would be drafted first, the bulk of draftees would come eventually from the 19 through 21 age groups.

Hershey said approximately five million men 22 through 25 would be processed during the first six months, but only about 70,000 actually would be subject to the peacetime service of 21 months.

And he said he believed that no more than 8000 would come from the 25-year-old group, first to be drafted.

District Selective Service officials yesterday estimated that some 7000 men in each age group from 18 through 25 will register here for the draft beginning August 30.

The Army expects to take around 225,000 men in the first year. Later, the total will be up around 900,000.

30,000 a Month Scheduled

It is up to the Army to say when it needs men, and how many. The draft service then will provide them. Hershey said yesterday if the Army asks for as many as 30,000 in its first call, the draft may have to dip down into the 23-year-olds right at the start.

Later the Army plans to take about that many each month.

Hershey said yesterday that deferments will be liberal, but added that selective service has not yet written regulations governing them.

The date for beginning of the draft has not yet been set, either, but Hershey said last week it probably will be shortly after October 1.

Registration of all men 18 through 25 begins August 30 and continues through September 18. This will be done by age group, too, with men of 25 signing up first, men 24 next, and so on.

The draft head stressed that all

U. S. Ambassador Carrying West's Proposals to Moscow

London, July 27 (AP).—U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith headed back to his Moscow post tonight with the Western powers' proposals for settling the German crisis with Russia.

A responsible British source said Smith and British and French diplomats in Moscow would seek personal interviews with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov in an attempt to break the Berlin deadlock.

Top American officials declined all comment on details of the rapid-fire three-power conferences held here the last two days. They said only that the three powers finally had threshed out an agreement on how to meet what they regard as Russia's gravest challenge in the troubled postwar period.

Foreign Secretary Bevin, who had planned a statement of Britain's view of the German crisis to the Commons on Wednesday, postponed his speech until Thursday.

A personal approach to Molotov would give the diplomats greater freedom for a less formal exchange of views than written notes between governments. Consequently it might lessen the chance of a flat diplomatic rejection of Western proposals, such as was met when the three powers sent simultaneous notes protesting the blockade recently.

Smith, who has been engaged in diplomatic exchanges here and in Berlin since Sunday, left by plane for Berlin tonight. He expected to proceed from Berlin Thursday.

Gen. Markos Claims Victory In First U. S. Press Interview

By Homer Bigart

Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

With General Markos in the Grammos Mountains, June 29 (Delayed).—My interview with General Markos was his first with the American press. He expressed complete confidence in the ability of his Andartes to hold indefinitely their strong positions in the Grammos and upper Pindus ranges of northwestern Greece. He claimed defensive victory as the first two weeks of the Greek army offensive ended.

The Partisan leader said heavy casualties had been inflicted on the Athens forces. He estimated enemy losses at 4500. From a slip of paper he read his own casualties up to June 27—65 dead, 390 injured, and "perhaps a few captured."

"Athens rejected our peace overtures," he said. "They thought they saw an evidence of weakness. Well, they wanted a fight and now they are getting it."

We talked in the churchyard of a mountain village. Markos had just arrived from the Konitsa sector. He was en route on horseback to the Nestorion front, where the Greek army apparently had launched its major thrust.

Avoid Spying Aircraft

As a precaution against spying aircraft, we sat beneath trees, the general with his maps spread on the ground around him. From the Nestorion front came the heavy rumble of Greek army artillery.

Markos looks so unlike the published photographs of him that at our first meeting I had failed to recognize him. The spreading mustache which he affected two years ago has been closely cropped. He is not as lean as photos had indicated but solidly built and of medium height. His eyes are closely set and deeply lined from squinting into the wind and sun. The brown hair under his Partisan cap was long and bushy. His mouth is broad and expressive. He has a quick and charming smile that can alter instantly a face which, in repose, seems hard, impatient, pitiless.

He talked with supreme confidence. It was the enemy's intention, he said, to push him down from the Albanian frontier, to drive him southward and deprive him of a protected flank. Then

U. N. Council Rebuffs Arabs On Palestine

Lake Success, July 27 (AP).—The Security Council refused today to approve a Syrian move to toss the Palestine problem before the International Court of Justice.

The vote on Syria's proposal was six to one, with four abstentions.

A majority of seven votes was required.

Britain, China, Syria, Belgium, Argentina and Colombia voted for the Arab proposal; the Soviet Ukraine stood alone against it, and the United States, France, Canada and Russia abstained.

Dr. Philip C. Jessup, United States deputy, and Jakob A. Malik, Soviet deputy foreign minister, led the opposition to the Syrian proposal.

Jessup told the Council the United States feared reference to the court would complicate the task of the United Nations mediator in Palestine.

Malik said the General Assembly already had decided the case of Palestine; there was no need to refer it to the Court. He accused Syria of trying to scuttle the U. N. Palestine partition decision.

Faris El Khouri, Syrian delegate, opened the debate with a pledge that the Arabs would abide by any decision of the International Court.

Marie Wins Informal Test In Assembly

French Deputies Back Him, 357-197, As Reds Seek To Question Plans

Paris, July 27 (NYHT).—The French National Assembly gave Premier Andre Marie and his newly organized cabinet an informal vote of confidence today.

When Francois Billoux, former Defense Minister, led a Communist attack on the membership of the Socialist-Popular Republican-Radical Socialist coalition cabinet and sought to question Marie on his program, the Premier objected and the deputies supported him by a vote of 357 to 197.

[The vote was prefaced, according to the Associated Press, by violent attacks on Paul Reynaud, new Finance Minister and Leon Blum, Socialist Vice Premier. Billoux, former Communist Minister, called them "the grave diggers of the Third Republic who worked for the defeat of France in 1940." Marie interrupted him with: "—at a time when you were heart and soul with the Nazis."—Editor's note.]

"The cabinet will hold its first meeting tomorrow morning to draw up a plan of work which will be presented to you Thursday or Friday," Marie, a Radical Socialist, said. "I thus keep my pledge to you to act quickly."

The immediate tasks facing Marie are to see that the budget is voted, to face the difficult problems of wages and mounting prices and to maintain the grudging Socialist support, obtained only after 48 hours of negotiation.

The French news agency AFP said tonight that French exports for June totaled 1,996,545 tons worth 44,351,000,000 francs ($147,836,000), a new post-liberation record in tonnage and franc values.

Export tonnage has been moving forward steadily since February, and the June report brings the French recovery effort in overseas markets to within 252,455 tons of the 1938 monthly average. It was 2,249,000 in the last prewar year.

Nationalists Take Shansi Initiative

Peiping, July 27 (AP).—The government has seized the initiative from the Communists in the battle around Taiyuan, capital of Shansi Province, press dispatches said today.

The Communists who once threatened to topple the walled city were reported driven back both south and west of Taiyuan. There was no claim, however, that the siege had been broken.

Thirteen Chinese were executed in Taiyuan as Communist spies.

President Gets GOP Freeze-Out In Address to 'Worst' Congress

President Truman in a temperate appeal to a straight-faced Congress yesterday called for price, profit and credit controls now to avoid another depression.

From the Congress he publicly horsewhipped in Philadelphia and labeled "the worst," he received polite Democratic applause and a Republican freeze-out. Later Republicans bombarded the press gallery with statements branding the speech "political" and worse.

Mr. Truman, reading his speech mildly instead of "pouring it on," asked limited price control and seven other antiinflation measures be made "the first order of business" and promptly enacted.

He put long range housing in the No. 2 priority spot, recommending swift passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill to produce "more houses of the kind our families need."

He called for action on nine other programs, including Federal aid to education, civil rights and nondiscriminatory displaced persons legislation, and asked a "more equitable" Federal pay act.

Mr. Truman received perfunctory standing applause from both sides as he entered. He read the speech slowly, without the ad libbed punch he gave to his July 15 convention hall lines. Fifteen times he was interrupted by applause, but it came mostly from Administration Democrats on the floor and in the executive gallery.

From Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) the President received one of the shortest introductions on record:

"The chair presents the President of the United States."

Martin said later that this was the "proper" introduction for a President. "I'll make the same presentation when Governor Dewey is elected."

But his termination of the session varied enough from the formal

Truman's Program Presented to Congress

President Truman's eight-point anti-inflation program, presented to Congress in his message yesterday, calls for:

1. An excess profits tax.
2. Consumer credit controls.
3. Regulation of bank credit.
4. Regulation of commodity speculation.
5. Allocation and inventory control of scarce commodities.
6. Stronger rent controls.
7. Rationing of products in short supply.
8. Price controls for scarce commodities which basically affect essential industrial production or the cost of living.

Legislative Program Urged By President in Message

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to pass legislation that would:

1. Control inflation.
2. Provide low-cost housing.
3. Give Federal assistance to education.
4. Increase Social Security benefits.
5. Amend the Displaced Persons Act.
6. Furnish funds to build permanent United Nations headquarters.
7. Approve the International Wheat Agreement.
8. Appropriate for a TVA steam plant.
9. Raise Federal pay.
10. Carry out the civil rights program.
11. Increase minimums wage levels.

He urged action on other measures "if the Congress finds time." This secondary list includes:

1. A health program.
2. An amended labor-management act.
3. A long-range farm program.
4. Stronger reciprocal trade agreements.
5. A universal training program.
6. A national science foundation.
8. The St. Lawrence waterway treaty.

Army to Keep Segregation, Bradley Says

Number of Draftees May Be Furloughed Because of Housing

Fort Knox, Ky., July 27 (AP).—Chief of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley told a news conference today that the Army will keep racial segregation as long as the Nation does.

"The Army is not out to make any social reforms, said Bradley. The Army will put men of different races in different companies. It will change that policy when the Nation as a whole changes it."

Lieut. Gen. Willard Paul, director of personnel, said the Army might find it necessary to furlough a "number" of new draftees as soon as they are inducted, because housing and training facilities possibly will not be available.

Bradley and Paul are here attending a three-day conference of high-ranking officers studying the possible adaptation of universal military training policies to all Army training.

Bradley told the Army's top brass that they must treat incoming selectees in a way that will send them back to civilian life as friends of the Army.

"Sure, we will have discipline and the caste system and we will keep the men busy," Bradley declared, but he added "we must treat our men as individuals and not as rows of men lined up on the parade field before us."

The Army's Chief of Staff said the Army had itself to blame for its status as "the favorite whipping boy of the country." He told the high-ranking officers they must work to sell the Army to the public, "instead of blasting their superiors and bragging about low prices in the post exchange."

Bradley said the caste system will remain in the Army, "and we need to make no apologies for it." The caste system, Bradley said, is the same in industry, "and really it's only the just reward for those who work hardest."

Separate clubs will be maintained for officers and enlisted men to maintain respect for rank, Bradley said, but he added he saw nothing wrong with officers and enlisted men who are close friends attending private parties together.

Republican Statement On Session

The text of the statement issued last night by the Republican leaders of Congress follows:

1. This session was called by the President not because this is an "extraordinary occasion" as required by the Constitution, but solely as a political maneuver in the campaign for his own reelection, and to add zest to an otherwise discouraged political convention. It was called without consultation with the leaders of Congress, after Congress had adjourned with the full acquiescence and approval of the minority leaders.

2. The call involves no reference to the critical situation in foreign policy in which no emergency action is requested of the Congress by it.

3. Serious legislative problems cannot be satisfactorily handled in the midst of a political campaign. Legislation should be a deliberative process, and every important measure should be debated from the viewpoint of the public interest. In the Eightieth Congress our debates have been remarkably free of partisan argument. The Eightieth Congress enacted a tremendous program of foreign and domestic legislation and completed all routine and emergency matters, generally recognized as an extraordinary record of accomplishment. Few realize that Federal legislation today covers such a wide field of subjects that only a fraction can be properly studied and handled in any one year. It would take at least six months to give proper consideration to the President's program. We agree with Senator Barkley's statement made in the Senate a month ago before politics entered the situation:

"I have done what I could to cooperate with the majority in bringing about an adjournment because I think if we sit here until after the convention, or if we sit here between the conventions, or after the two conventions, the entire time of the Congress will be taken up with political bickering and political legislation and politi-

Joint Statement Virtually Says 'No' in Advance To Proposals

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Repuplician congressional leaders last night drove for a "soon as possible" adjournment after a scorching rejoinder to the President's call for immediate price control and housing legislation.

In a joint statement by top Republicans in both houses, they promised to give the President's 11-point program a quick once-over, do what they could of an "emergency" nature, and then go home.

But their statement, subject to approval by the full Republican membership of both houses, practically said "No" in advance to the Truman proposals, and termed the recall of Congress a "political maneuver."

One slow fuse in the declaration was a routine announcement that the House-approved antipoll tax bill will be immediately called up in the Senate while banking committees of the two houses are looking over Mr. Truman's anti-inflation and housing requests.

That was all that was necessary to touch off a pre-announced Southern civil rights filibuster, that will keep all other legislation off the Senate floor while it lasts.

The GOP's "Turnip Day" backfire worked up to last night's final explosion after Republican members, sitting with folded hands through Mr. Truman's message, gave it the chilliest reception yet.

Individual members started penciling rebuttals before the speech was over. House and Senate Republican Steering Committees held a separate round of conferences and then met jointly to frame their "answer."

They failed to set a fixed deadline for the session but several individual leaders fixed a rough one of "two to three weeks."

A statement by Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey advised the GOP leaders "to stay around a week or two and then go home" brought this announcement from James C. Hagerty, Dewey's press secretary, in Albany:

"The Governor feels that the Congress should stay in Washington and give careful consideration to whatever was proposed in the President's message."

Senate Republican Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft told reporters he talked with Governor

Ask Wife About Prices, Congressmen Told

By The Associated Press

President Truman departed from his prepared text yesterday to tell members of Congress they should know as well as anybody else how high prices are rising.

"There are not many very rich men in Congress. Most of you have to live on your own salaries," ad libbed Mr. Truman who was a Senator himself four years ago.

"All you have to do is go home and ask your wife how prices are compared with January 31."

Lone Gunman Gets $335 at Central Market

A lone gunman last night got $335 in cash in a swift holdup of the operator of the Central Market, 2629 14th st. nw.

Aaron Slopak, 7528 12th st. nw., told police he was counting the day's receipts preparatory to closing the store, when the bandit walked in about 10:30 p. m.

The man produced a pistol, leveled it at Slopak and shoveled up the total day's receipts. Then, Slopak said, he ripped a telephone from the wall and left. Slopak called police on another telephone in the rear of the market.

The store operator described the holdup man as white, slim and about 5 feet 10 inches.

13 Killed, 4 Hurt In Mine Explosion At Princeton, Ind.

Princeton, Ind., July 27 (AP).—Thirteen miners were killed in an explosion today at Kings' Mine, three miles south of Princeton. Four were injured, two of them critically.

The blast occurred at 1:55 p.m. (CST). Three hours later, mine officials said no workers remained unaccounted for and they believed the list was complete.

Cause of the explosion was not determined.

The mine had resumed operation recently after being closed several days because of water seepage.

The mine had a series of explosions last November and fire which followed them caused damage so extensive the mine was closed more than two months.

Boy, 4, Killed When Turnstile Tips Over at Fairlawn Pool

Four-year-old John E. Caruso, jr., of 1424 22d st. se., died yesterday afternoon when an unused turnstile fell on him at the Anacostia Swimming Pool, Fairlawn Park.

The 250-pound device toppled when he wandered 20 feet from his mother as she bought their tickets for a swim. His chest crushed, he died a short time later in Providence Hospital emergency room, where his crippled father had been summoned from his hospital bed on the second floor.

An autopsy is scheduled for today to determine cause of death, and fix responsibility.

Mrs. Marie Caruso, the mother, said she heard her boy scream once. She rushed to his side as Louis Groot, 19, of 1030 Burns st. se., a locker boy, lifted the weight off the lad. The mother snatched him up and rushed out to the street.

Park policemen cruising by drove her to the hospital.

While Mrs. Caruso awaited word, her husband, upstairs, was notified and brought down in his wheelchair. He did not see his boy alive; death came while he waited outside the room with his wife.

The father, an oil-burner salesman, had been hospitalized for an operation on an infected ankle and was discharged later yesterday afternoon.

The Carusos have one other son, Vincent, 13.

Homicide detectives investigating said the turnstile had a broken stanchion and had been removed only last week for repairs. The pool is operated by Government Services, Inc.

Mrs. Lavone Dickensheets Scott recently divorced Hugh Lenox Scott, Andrews' stepson.

Last Friday's marriage was blessed, a half-hour after it was completed, by the Rev. J. Leslie Glenn, in St. John's Church. By 2 p. m., the bridegroom was back at work in the Navy Department.

Marguerite Andrews, daughter of the Assistant Secretary and his first wife, also is engaged. Her fiance is Royal William Randall, jr., of Mobile, Ala., who is studying for his doctorate in physics at Rice Institute, Houston, Tex. They plan to marry sometime next summer.

General Staff Probes Guard Lack of Recruit Equipment

By Howard Dutkin
Post Reporter

Camp Pendleton, Va., July 27.—An Army investigation opened here today into supply deficiencies in the District of Columbia National Guard, which started summer training yesterday without enough mess kits or uniforms to go around.

The investigation is being conducted by Col. Merle R. Thompson of the organization and training division of the Army Department General Staff. Colonel Thompson said he would report his findings directly to Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull, chief of the general staff's organization and training division.

"My purpose is to find out if the troops are short of materials essential to their training," he said.

Meanwhile, Guard public relations officers here denied published reports that indicated many of the District Guardsmen were forced to stay in camp during pass hours because of lack of proper clothing. Those Guardsmen who lacked "sun tans," official pass uniform, had civilian clothes they wore en route to the District Armory, the take-off point, the officers explained. Either is permissible clothing for men on pass, the officers explained.

Earlier, a report that 200 men were without mess kits and uniforms among the approximately 900 officers and men of the District National Guard was forwarded to the Army.

The report was made by the Inspector General of the Second Army, with headquarters at Fort Meade, according to Col. Charles M. Myers, Second Army training

Monsignor Sheehy Wrote Tribute to 'Sara,' Heads C. U. Religious Education Branch

To many many Americans, the Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy is chiefly remembered as author of "Dear Sara," tribute to the USS Saratoga just before she became an atom bomb target at Bikini.

But even before the action of Pope Pius XII in promoting him to the rank of domestic prelate with the title of Right Reverend Monsignor, announced yesterday, the Catholic University official had other distinctions to his credit.

A militant spokesman against both nazism and communism, he supported the late President Roosevelt's revision of neutrality legislation in the years before World War II. He went on active duty as a Navy chaplain on February 8, 1941, when he said, "The time has come for action rather than words."

During five years in the Navy, Msgr. Sheehy served aboard the USS Mississippi and Saratoga and at Pearl Harbor. His duties took him into active war theaters—Bougainville, Rabaul, the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, Sabang and Sourabaya.

Returns to Catholic U.

On October 1, 1945, Msgr. Sheehy went back to his peacetime job as head of the department of religious education at Catholic University, a position he still holds.

Msgr. Sheehy publicly predicted in 1939 that the United States would have to go to war with Germany. In the days before the war, his talk against isolationism was used by Democratic leaders as support for the Lend-Lease Bill.

Msgr. Sheehy came to Catholic University in 1926 for graduate work and returned to serve on its faculty in 1927.

Author of five books on student guidance, he is a past president of the Eastern Association of College Deans and Student Advisers.

He was born in Irwin, Ill., April 26, 1898.

Since reverting to inactive Navy status, he has maintained an active interest in that arm of the service and last spring accompanied the fleet to the Mediterranean where he was granted a private audience with the Pope.

Democrats Hit Air Spotting of Truman Critics

The Democratic National Committee has protested allocation of radio time to Republican leaders to answer President Truman's special session message, it was learned last night.

John M. Redding, publicity director of the committee, sent a wire to the National Broadcasting Co. questioning the right of GOP leaders to free time to reply to a presidntial mesage.

Redding's wire said neither the White House nor the Democratic National Committee had requested radio time for the President, that his speech wa broadcast as a public service, and the committee challenged any network construction of it as a "political" speech.

The wire followed announcement that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) will answer Mr. Truman's message over an NBC hookup tonight from 7:30 to 8 p. m. (EST).

Spokesmen for the committee said similar protests will be sent to the other radio broadcasting companies if they book radio time for congressional leaders to "reply" to the President.

Redding's wire said that while the Democratic committee did not agree that the President's speech was political, if the NBC so interpreted it, he wanted to raise these questions:

Should not Gov. Thomas A. Dewey, the GOP presidential nominee, be allotted the time rather than individual GOP leaders?

Wasn't the proposed evening billing of Taft and Halleck a more valuable spot than the President's midday broadcast?

If all four major networks allotted separate time on different evenings to Republican leaders, wouldn't they in effect have four separate radio plugs to the President's one joint broadcast?

A spokesman for the committee said Redding requested a similar radio time allotment for congressional Democratic leaders to reply to the Republican lawmakers.

GOP Leaders Plan Quick Adjournment

Dewey by telephone before the message was delivered.

"He made no suggestions whatever," Taft said.

"Did he agree with the course you proposed?" Taft was asked.

"He made no objections to it," said Taft. He said Herbert Brownell, jr., Governor Dewey's campaign manager, was consulted on the content of the joint statement

In line with the party's promise to "examine" all of Mr. Truman's proposals, Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) called a meeting of his House Banking Committee for Thursday but said it is doubtful the group would approve "any new powers until he (Mr. Truman) has used the powers he already has." Paul Porter, former OPA chief, and the President's adviser on price measures, will be invited to testify.

Senate Banking Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) has not returned, but Taft said the Senate Banking group also will "consider" the Truman 8-point anti-inflation program.

But the leadership statement made it clear that price and housing measures alike were headed for the pigeonhole.

It said "restoration of OPA, subsidies, price control, wage control and rationing, the police state measures decried by President Truman himself, would only make the situation worse, create black markets and check the increase in production which is the only ultimate solution."

Truman Policies Blamed

It charged present high prices were largely brought about by Administration policies, that Mr. Truman already has wide powers to check inflation if he were willing to use them.

While ordering housing hearings, here's how the leaders said "No" to the President's call for housing action now:

"We are deeply concerned with a long-range program increasing still further the number of homes to be constructed, but such a program involves serious complications and differences of opinion which cannot be dealt with adequately at this special session."

Materials Declared Short

The Republicans insisted the abbreviated housing bill passed last session helped stimulate building of a million new housing units, which construction "exhausts the materials and labor available for the purpose."

The declaration effectively sidetracked action in three other categories, appropriations, nominations and minor bills, saying:

"We do not intend to consider routine legislation or open the Pandora's box of the legislative calendar. The Senate does not intend to consider nominations. We do not intend to make any substantial additions to the huge appropriations already provided for the Administration which already threatens the continuance of a balanced budget, and would add to the fires of inflation."

Hostile GOP Comment

The tone of the Republican "reply" was set earlier in the day by a flood of hostile GOP comment.

Representative Hugh D. Scott (Pa.), chairman of the Republican National Committee, charged the President "failed completely to establish the existence of a national emergency." Scott termed Mr. Truman's recommendations "a collection of generalities, including many of the discredited proposals of the dying New Deal."

Senator Taft said the message was "full of inaccuracies and omissions on the subject of high prices and it would take six months to consider the whole program."

Truman Speech Assailed

Speaker Martin called it "a political speech that, if put into effect, would mean heavy additional taxes for the people."

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) said the President "insults the intelligence of the American people."

Acting Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) called it a "complete rehash of old messages."

House Rules Chairman Leo Allen (R., Ill.) termed it a "cross between a death rattle in the throat of the New Deal and the squalls of the recently born Wallace Party."

Except for the Southern contingent, Democrats generally called it an "excellent message—admirably presented."

Senator Barkley said the program is "attainable if Congress will take it and go to work on it."

Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said it is "obvious" Congress will take no action on many of the issues but Democrats "cannot escape our responsibility to bring prices down."

Senator J. Howard McGrath (R. I.), Democratic National Chairman, said what Congress does about the message "will be a test of our patriotism; what is not done will be a proof of our partisanship."

Mrs. Douglas Backs Program

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.),—"I'm 100 per cent for the President's program."

A statement by New York's Democratic delegation said:

"The issues of inflation and housing alone justify the President in calling Congress to its duty. To a man we are pledged to stick to our jobs, and keep others at their jobs, until proper legislation is enacted."

New Record Set For Workers in Nonfarm Pursuits

Employment in nonfarm pursuits totaled 44,900,000 in mid-June, an all time high for that season, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced yesterday.

The figure was 1,100,000 above mid-June, 1947, and 300,000 above May 15, 1948. It was the highest level since the record 46,618,000 set just before Christmas, 1947.

Construction employment moved upward sharply reflecting the greater volume of housing started in the first half of the year. The number of workers on contract construction rose to 2,180,000 in June, a postwar high for the industry. Usually the peak is reached in September.

Reversing the trend of the previous two months, manufacturing industries reported a rise of 165,000. This made a total of more than 16 millions, but was still well below marks reached earlier this year.

Smathers Urges Primary Instead Of Conventions

Representative George A. Smathers (D., Fla.) yesterday proposed a constitutional amendment to nominate presidential and vice presidential candidates in popular primaries, instead of in conventions as at present.

to get a laugh from Republicans on the floor.

"The purpose of the meeting having been achieved, the joint session is now dissolved," he said.

Mr. Truman laid before Congress essentially the same anti-inflation program he recommended eight months ago with some tightening "in the light of changing circumstances."

He said his second reason for calling Congress back was the the "desperate need of more houses at lower prices." He termed the Senate-passed Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, now blocked in the House Banking and Rules Committees "the bill we need . . . we need it now, not a year from now."

A petition to force the bill to the House floor has been pending since last session. Sponsors said it now has around 150 signatures. A majority of 218 is required to force action.

Administration housing strategy is expected to concentrate on signing up this petition.

Mr. Truman stressed that none of the other "important" measures he recommended should be permitted to interferee with "vital work on legislation concerning high prices and housing."

He got his first good hand from the Democratic side of the aisle on these five terse sentences; obviously aimed at cries for immediate adjournment:

"High prices are not taking 'time off' for the election. High prices are not waiting until the next session of the Congress. High prices are getting worse. They are getting worse every day. We cannot afford to wait for the next Congress to act."

All but a handful of Republicans sat dead pan through this and other Truman sallies but friends on the Democratic side and in the galleries broke out in applause five times during his call for inflation controls.

His demand for legislation to provide houses at prices "which families of moderate income, particularly veterans, can afford to pay," got three separate cheers.

Other applauded passages:

Congress should provide Federal assistance to the States in meeting the present crisis in education, to raise teachers' income and assure a schooling for every child.

The present 40-cent minimum wage is pitifully inadequate in the face of today's high prices and all workers now should have a 75-cent wage floor.

The displaced persons bill passed last session discriminates against persons because of their religion, land or origin or occupation and is contrary "to all American ideals. A new act should be passed wiping out these discriminations and providing for 400,000 DP admissions.

Congress should reconsider last session's cuts and "crippling limitations" on power and reclamation programs and provide funds to start a TVA steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn., and other projects.

Congress should enact all of the measures he recommended last February "to protect and extend basic civil rights of citizenship and human liberty."

Congress should raise "inadequate" old age insurance benefits at least 50 per cent, lower the age at which women can receive benefits from 65 to 60 years, and extend social security to the millions uncovered.

In addition, Mr. Truman listed a 65-million-dollar loan for construction of New York United Nations headquarters and Senate ratification of the international wheat agreement among this season's "musts."

Submitted to Congress on an "if you have time for them" basis were eight other measures Mr. Truman said certainly should be passed by the next Congress.

These were a comprehensive health program, a "fair and sund" Labor-Managemet Relations Act to replace the "unfair" Taft-Hartley Act, a "real" long-range cirocal trade farm program, a "stronger" Reciprocal Trade Act, universal trainign, a national science foundatoin, strengthened antitrust laws and ratification of the St. Lawrence waterways treaty.

Measure to Admit 402,000 DPs Is Offered in House

An Administration bill authorizing entry into the United States of 402,000 displaced persons in the next four years instead of the present provision for 205,000 in the next two years was introduced yesterday in Congress.

The measure, introduced amid signs that President Truman would receive some Republican support in his fight for revision of existing DP legislation, also would eliminate certain restrictions described as discriminatory against Jews and some Catholic displaced persons.

McMath Leads In Arkansas

Little Rock, Ark., July 27 (AP).—Sidney S. McMath, Hot Springs prosecutor, took an early lead over the seven-man field for the Arkansas Democratic gubernatorial nomination in today's preferential primary election.

With 216 of the State's 2158 precincts reporting, McMath had 4839 votes to 4376 for James (Uncle Mac) Mackrell, radio showman and flour salesman.

Jack Holt, former Arkansas attorney general, and Horace E. Thompson, former internal service collector, had 3449 votes each.

The other three candidates had 161 votes between them.

Unless one receives a majority of the votes cast, the two highest candidates will meet in the regular Democratic primary August 10.

Un-American Unit To Quiz Witness In N. Y. Inquiry

The House Un-American Activities Committee has summoned a witness in the New York grand jury Communist inquiry to a closed hearing later this week to discuss "Government espionage," it was disclosed last night.

Chief Investigator Robert E. Stripling said a subpena was served last Friday on Elizabeth T. Bentley, New York City, to appear before the committee. He refused to disclose the time and place of the hearing.

Stripling quoted Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) as saying, "Her testimony will involve Government espionage." He added that "other witnesses" will be quizzed at the secret session.

[The witness was described by a committee staff member as "a beautiful blond."—Editor's Note].

2½ Tons of TNT Set Off In Tests for Bombproofs

Dugway, Utah, July 27 (U.P.).—Terrific columns of flame-filled black smoke and dust shot skyward here today as the Army began experiments to determine the best way to construct underground fortifications.

Four separate TNT explosions were set off. The most spectacular were the detonation of two charges of 2500 pounds apiece.

The tests are to determine the resistance of various forms of rock and clay strata to explosions.

Navy Commissions First Cargo Sub

Mare Island, Navy Yard, Calif., July 27 (AP).—The Navy today commissioned its first underwater cargo carrier, the converted submarine Barbero.

She will be completed for sea trials by October 1.

In drydock, the sub appeared to newsmen to have only one external modification from the standard 1526-ton, 312-foot long fleet model. This change was a "Schnorkel" breathing tube which permits extended underwater cruising on diesel power. No visitor was allowed below.

Text of Truman Message to Special Session of Congress

Legislators Hear President Deliver Address in Person

The text of President Truman's personally delivered message to the special session of Congress yesterday:

MR. PRESIDENT, Mr. Speaker, members of the Eightieth Congress:

THE urgent needs of the American people require our presence here today.

Our people demand legislative action by their Government to do two things: First, to check inflation and the rising cost of living, and second, to help in meeting the acute housing shortage.

These are matters which affect every American family. They also affect the entire world, for world peace depends upon the strength of our economy.

The Communists, both here and abroad, are counting on our present prosperity turning into a depression. They do not believe that we can—or will—put the brake on high prices. They are counting on economic collapse in this country.

If we should bring on another great depression in the United States by failing to control high prices, the world's hope for lasting peace would vanish. A depression in the United States would cut the ground from under the free nations of Europe. Economic collapse in this country would prevent the recovery throughout the world which is essential to lasting peace. We would have only ourselves to blame for the tragedy that would follow.

IN THESE tense days, when our strength is being tested all over the world, it would be reckless folly if we failed to act against inflation.

High prices are not taking "time off" for the election.

High prices are not waiting until the next session of the Congress.

High prices are getting worse. They are getting worse every day.

We cannot afford to wait for the next Congress to act.

The 81st Congress will not get under way for nearly six months. Before the new Congress could take action against high prices, it would have to draft new bills, study them, hold hearings, debate, and decide whether to pass them. It would be at least eight months from now before the new Congress could pass the laws we need.

Eight months more of inflation would be much too long.

It was eight months ago—November, 1947—that I called a special session of this Congress, and recommended a comprehensive anti-inflation program. But that program was not enacted. If it had been enacted, we would have lower prices today.

Since last November, prices have gone even higher. As every housewife knows, food prices rose rapidly throughout 1947. They are climbing even faster now. Month after month, the cost of clothing, fuel and rent keeps on going up.

The cost of living is now higher than ever before in our history.

WE CANNOT RISK the danger, or suffer the hardship, of another eight months of doing nothing about high prices.

Prices are already so high that last year more than one fourth of the families of this country were forced to spend more than they earned. Families of low or moderate income are being priced out of the market for many of the necessities of life. They are able to buy less than they could two years ago, and they are paying a lot more for what they can buy.

At the same time, industrial prices, which affect all business and employment, are rising, and rising fast. Large price increases have recently been announced by industries that set the pace for the whole economy. Within the last few days, the steel industry, for example, increased its prices, on the average, by more than $9 a ton.

The rise in industrial prices is just as important, in the long run, as the high cost of living. It is already squeezing the independent businessman. It threatens to destroy a fair balance between industry and agriculture. It can end only in catastrophe if allowed to continue.

In the face of these facts, it is foolish to point at every feeble straw as a sign that the danger is disappearing. In February, some people said that the break in commodity prices meant that inflation was almost over. They were wrong. Prices rose again.

There are still some people who repeat the old argument which was used by those who killed price control two year ago. They said that if we would only take controls off, production would increase, prices would go down, and there would be more for everybody at a lower cost.

THE RECORD shows unmistakably that this argument was false.

Production has increased somewhat, and we want it to increase still more. But even with full employment, full use of available materials, and practically full use of plant capacity—all of which we have today—prices are still climbing much faster than production. It is obvious that we cannot rely solely on more production to curb high prices. Instead, we must attack inflation directly.

If we do not stop inflation, production and employment will both fall sharply when the break comes.

Positive action by this Government is long overdue. It must be taken now.

I therefore urge the Congress to take strong, positive action to control inflation. I have reexamined the anti-inflation program I proposed to the Congress eight months ago. In its essentials that program is as sound now as it was then. It has been revised and strengthened in the light of changing circumstances. The program I now propose is as follows:

First, I recommend that an excess-profits tax be reestablished in order to provide a Treasury surplus and provide a brake on inflation.

Second, I recommend that consumer credit controls be restored in order to hold down inflationary credit.

Third, I recommend that the Federal Reserve Board be given greater authority to regulate inflationary bank credit.

Fourth, I recommend that authority be granted to regulate speculation on the commodity exchanges.

Fifth, I recommend that authority be granted for allocation and inventory control of scarce commodities which basically affect essential industrial production, or the cost of living.

Sixth, I recommend that rent controls be strengthened, and that adequate appropriations be provided for enforcement, in order to prevent further unwarranted rent increases.

SEVENTH, I recommend that standby authority be granted to ration those few products in short supply which vitally affect the health and welfare of our people. On the basis of present facts, and unless further shortages occur, this authority might not have to be used at all.

Eighth, I recommend that price control be authorized for scarce commodities which basically affect essential industrial production or the cost of living. I have said before, and I repeat, that many profit margins have been adequate to absorb wage increases without the price increases that have followed. Rising wages and rising standards of living, based on increasing productivity and a fair distribution of income, is the American way. Noninflationary wage increases can and should continue to be made by free collective bargaining. Where the Government imposes a price ceiling, wage adjustments which can be absorbed within the price ceiling should not be interfered with by the Government. The Government should have the authority, however, to limit wage adjustments which would force a break in a price ceiling, except where wage adjustments are essential to remedy hardship, to correct inequities, or to prevent an actual lowering of living standards.

THE measures I have recommended make up a balanced program to attack high prices. They are all necessary to check rising prices and safeguard our economy against the danger of depression. If they are made the first order of business by the Congress, as they should be, they can be promptly enacted. Every week of delay will mean additional hardship for the American people.

The second reason why I have called the Congress back is that our people need legislation now to help meet the national housing shortage.

We desperately need more housing at lower prices—prices which families of moderate income, particularly veterans' families, can afford to pay. We are not getting it.

Even more urgently, we need more rental housing—especially low-rent housing. We are not getting it.

Most of the housing new being built is for sale, or for rent, at prices far above the reach of the average American family.

I have recommended time and time again that the Congress pass a comprehensive housing bill which would help us obtain more housing at lower prices—both for sale and for rent.

A good housing bill, Senate Bill 866, known as the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, passed the Senate on April 22. This bill would provide aid to cities in clearing slums and in building low-rent housing projects. It would give extensive aid to the private home building industry. It includes provisions for farm housing, and for research to bring down building costs. It contains many other provisions, all aimed at getting more housing at lower prices and at lower rents.

THIS IS THE bill we need. We need it now, not a year from now.

If this legislation is passed this summer, it will be possble to start immediately the production of more houses of the kind our families need, at prices they can afford to pay. If it is not passed now, the Eighty-first Congress will have to start all over again with a new housing bill. In that case, we might lose a full year in meeting our national housing need.

This Congress can complete action on this comprehensive housing bill in a few days. I strongly urge that it do so.

I have called the Congress back primarily to deal with high prices and with the housing shortage. Delay on either of these items would be most dangerous. In addition, there are other important legislative measures on which delay would injure us at home or impair our world relations.

I therefore recommend that the present session, without allowing anything to interfere with its vital work on legislation concerning high prices and housing, take action on certain other important measures. These measures can speedily be enacted now because of the amount of study already given to them by the Congress.

First, the Congress should provide Federal assistance to the States in meeting the present crisis in education. The children in our schools, and the men and women who teach there, have been made the victims of inflation. More children are entering school then ever before. But inflation has cut down the purchasing power of the money devoted to educational purposes. Teachers' salaries, for the most part, have lagged far behind increases in the cost of living. The overcrowding of our schools is seriously detrimental to the health and the education of our boys and girls. Every month that we delay in meeting this problem will cause damage that can never be repaired. Several million children of school age are unable to attend school, largely because of lack of facilities or teachers.

To meet these vital educational needs, the Congress should complete action on Senate Bill 472, which passed the Senate on April 1. All that remains to be done is its passage by the House of Representatives.

PROMPT ACTION by the Congress is also needed to help another group of our people who are suffering from inflation. These are the workers who depend on the protection of a minimum wage law. The present minimum wage is pitifully inadequate in the face of today's high prices. Proposals to raise minimum wages have long been before the Congress. I urgently recommend that the minimum wage be raised to at least 75 cents an hour at this session. Senate Bill 2062 and its companion House bills would be suitable measures for this purpose.

I urge also that action be taken by the Congress to relieve other victims of inflation. These are the people who depend upon the benefits being paid under the old-age and survivors insurance system. The average old-age retirement benefit for a man and his wife is only $39 a month. For a widow with two children, the average monthly benefit is only $49. These benefits are utterly inadequate. I urge that they be increased by at least 50 per cent and that the age at which women can receive benefits be lowered from 65 to 60 years. I also hope that the protection of this system will be extended to the millions who are not now covered.

In our relations with the rest of the world, action is also needed at once, and can be taken quickly, to afford additional proof that we mean what we say when we talk about freedom, humanity, and international cooperation for peace and prosperity. Three measures are involved.

FIRST, THE Displaced Persons Act in its present form discriminates unfairly against some displaced persons because of their religion, land of origin or occupation. These provisions are contrary to all American ideals. This act should be promptly amended to wipe out these discriminations. Furthermore, the present act permits the entry of only 200,000 persons, and charges them against future immigration quotas. I believe strongly that the act should provide for the entry of 400,000 persons over a four-year period, and they should be outside the normal immigration quotas. The act can and should be amended promptly.

Second, many people in the world must wonder how strongly we support the United Nations when we hesitate to assist the construction of its permanent home in this country. Legislation can and should be passed at once to authorize a loan by the United States Government to the United Nations, for the construction of U. N. headquarters buildings in New York City.

The international wheat agreement is another vital measure on which the Congress should act. This agreement is designed to insure stabilty in the world wheat market in the years ahead when wheat will be more plentiful. It would guarantee American farmers an export market of 185 million bushels of wheat at a fair price during each of the next five years. Since the agreement is in the form of a treaty, it requires only ratification by the Senate. Although this agreement should have been ratified by July 1 of this year, we have good reason to believe that it can still be made effective if it is now ratified promptly.

I WISH to call to the attention of the Congress three other problems on which action can and should be taken at this session.

The Congress should reconsider its recent actions which cut sharply into our national electric power policy. There is an acute shortage of electric power in this country now. I am therefore resubmitting to the Congress appropriation requests for certain power projects which must be provided right away. These requests include the TVA steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn., and certain other projects on which congressional reductions, if allowed to stand, will delay the production of power for a year or more. These appropriations should be promptly enacted, and at the same time certain crippling limitations should be removed from the law.

In the final days before adjourning in June, the Congress passed a bill raising the salaries of some Federal employes. However, this bill neglected long overdue reforms in Federal pay scales and discriminated unfairly against certain groups of employes. The Congress should take this opportunity to enact more equitable and realistic Federal pay legislation.

Finally, I wish again to urge upon the Congress the measures I recommended last February to protect and extend basic civil rights of citizenship and human liberty. A number of bills to carry out my recommendations have been introduced in the Congress. Many of them have already received careful consideration by congressional committees. Only one bill, however, has been enacted, a bill relating to the rights of Americans of Japanese origin. I believe that it is necessary to enact the laws I have recommended in order to make the guarantees of the Constitution real and vital. I believe they are necessary to carry out our American ideals of liberty and justice for all.

I HOPE there is no misunderstanding of the recommendations I have made. I have asked the Congress to return, first of all, in order to meet the urgent need of our people for relief from high prices and the housing shortage. I urge

Wallace Youth Whoop 'Er Up Here—Mildly

A small sample of the wild enthusiasm which marked the founding convention of the Young Progressives of America in Philadelphia was brought to Washington yesterday.

Several dozen of Young Progressives, ranging in age from 16 to 29 years, came here in what their leaders termed a "spontaneous demonstration" to urge repeal of the draft law "immediate enactment" of civil rights measures, and to protest the New York indictment of Communist leaders.

Somewhat haggard from loss of sleep during the convention and by the trek here from Philadelphia—which included hitch-hiking for many—they nevertheless demonstrated that their volubility was still intact.

But in contrast to convention reports of well-oiled organization tactics in Philadelphia, the local "demonstration" was marked by its lack of cohesion.

"Know Nothing" Party

During most of the day, leaders said they had "no idea" just how many delegates were here, or just which groups were buttonholing what Senators and Representatives at the Capitol, explaining that nothing had been arranged in advance.

In the early afternoon, 30 young men and women, about one-third of them Negroes, were present in the 1722 Connecticut ave. nw. headquarters of the Progressive Party of Washington. Later in the day, officials estimated that "approximately 50" Young Progressives were here, including delegates from Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, California, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and North Carolina.

Mrs. Dorothy Smith Dailey, 25, a former WAC and now candidate for Massachusetts State Representative from Boston, was in charge of the delegation and said she suggested the one-day "march" on Washington at the convention on Monday. "The response was wonderful," she said.

Budget Raised in Pennies

A "budget" of $65 in pennies, nickels and dimes was raised in Philadelphia, she said, and the delegates headed for Washington by whatever means they could. Some arrived Monday night, staying at the Government tourist camp at Hains Point.

All the delegates expressed indignation and "alarm" at the segregation they said they found in Washington. "It is almost unbelievable," said Lee, "that here, in the Nation's Capital, we find that Negroes are treated like persons contaminated."

About 20 delegates later paid a visit to their "No. 2 Idol," Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), candidate for Vice President on the third-party ticket.

Taylor shook hands all around and signed autographs while the youths beamed. As they were leaving his office, one delegate said, "Thank you, Mr. Vice President," bringing giggles from the others and a smile from Taylor.

Young GOP Club Opens Montgomery Drive

The Montgomery County (Md.) Young Republicans Club last night opened their 1948 campaign activities at a meeting in the offices of the Party's State Central Committee in Bethesda.

Offically sanctoned by the Maryland State Central Committee, the campaign got underway with the appointment of Mrs. Olga Beck 6611 Hillandale rd., Chevy Chase, Md., to head the club's membership drive committee.

Truman Calls For U. S. Pay Adjustment

President Truman yesterday called on the special session of Congress to enact "more equitable and realistic" pay legislation for Federal employes.

In so doing, he scored provisions of the Federal pay bill passed at the regular session which set a flat increase of $330 for Federal employes excepting postal workers, who were authorized raises of $450

The Federal pay recommendation was one of 11 points presented by the President yesterday for congressional action.

Concerning the pay, President Truman declared:

"In the final days before adjourning in June, the Congress passed a bill raising the salaries of some Federal employes. However, this bill neglected long overdue reforms in Federal pay scales and discrimtnated unfairly against certain groups of employes. This Congress should take this opportunity to enact more equitable and realistic Federal pay legislation."

President Truman had sharply criticized the former Federal pay bill on July 3 when he signed it into law. He was particularly incensed at the bill's provision disqualifying pay raises to those already paid more than $10,330 a year. The ceiling resulted in raising pay of some employes above the amount received by their department heads.

At the same time, he characterized as "grossly unfair" and discriminatory the bill's failure to provide funds for pay raises for District government employes.

Unmentioned in the President's message yesterday, the pay raise for District employes may get some attention at a Senate Republican leadership meeting scheduled for Capitol Hill this morning.

At least, Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.), chairman of the Senate District fiscal affairs subcommittee, will try to get the go ahead signal from GOP leaders on the local financial muddle.

Some 17,000 local municipal employes were voted a $330 pay increase in the regular session of Congress, but the payment is contingent on revenue being raised to meet the six million dollars increase in the local payroll.

cal oratory, and I do not want that to be brought about. I want to finish what we can finish and adjourn the Congress, and I have tried my best to cooperate with the leaders on the other side to bring about an adjournment."

4. The President's quarrel with the Eightieth Congress is not its failure to enact legislation, but a fundamental difference in Government philosophy between the President and Congress. The President would fix wages, fix prices, expand Government spending, increase Federal taxes, socialize and nationalize medicine and generally regiment the life of every family, as well as agriculture, labor and industry, and his proposals would create an annual budget which could not be less than 60 billion dollars which would make inflation inevitable and permanent. The Congress believes that progress must be made and all our problems solved within the principles of liberty, equality and justice to all men which guided this country for 150 years. This difference has resulted in a constant conflict, resulting in many vetoes by the President, and frequent action overriding his vetoes. Constructive legislation which the President did not dare to veto has been criticized and attacked by him. It is difficult and dangerous to work out great public problems without the slightest cooperation from a hostile President. The only way this fundamental difference can be resolved is by vote of the people at the November election.

Emergencies Few

5. In the President's program there is very little of an emergency nature. Most of the social welfare legislation proposed is of a permament character which can be considered more thoroughly next winter. The Democrats controlled Congress for 14 years, professing the greatest interest in social welfare legislation. Now they say that they failed to deal adequately with social security, education, health and housing and blame the Republicans for not enacting the program they failed to enact during 14 years.

6. We believe, therefore, that this session should be limited to a short period as suggested by the President himself, and our efforts will be devoted to completing the session as soon as possible. We shall carefully examine all of the President's recommendations to determine whether there are any matters which can be dealt with promptly on an emergency basis. We do not intend to consider routine legislation or open the Pandora's box of the legislative calendar. The Senate does not intend to consider nominations. We do not intend to make any substantial additions to the huge appropriations already provided for the Administration which already threaten the continuance of a balanced budget, and would add to the fires of inflation.

7. According to present intentions the program for the first week will include Senate consideration of the anti poll tax bill already passed by the House in order that there may be a proper opportunity for all to vote in the November election. During the first week also the committee of both houses will give consideration to the President's anti-inflation proposals to determine whether there are any additional powers which might be helpful in dealing with high prices and which the executive does not already have.

The present situation has been brought about largely by the Administration's policies in encouraging and failing to prevent vastly excessive exports, inflating the debt and currency before and during the war, encouraging general patterns of wage increase on the theory that they would not increase prices, failing to use their powers to restrain bank credit, and spending vast amounts of Government money for every kind of project, competing for labor and materials with private industry. It is our view that the restoration of OPA, subsidies, price control, wage control and rationing, the police State methods decried by President Truman himself, would only make the situation worse, create black markets and check the increase in production which is the ultimate solution. The President already has wide powers to check inflation if he were willing to use them. He has power to cut the amount of Government spending in many fields, to limit Government purchasing in these fields where commodities are short, to limit bank credit and limit consumer credit.

During the first week also, committees of both houses will give further consideration to the housing problem and any proposals in respect thereto. Much already has been done to solve that problem. Stimulated by the legisation adopted by the Eightieth Congress, a million new dwelling units are being constructed this year, and their construction practically exhausts the materials and labor available for the purpose. This is more than twice the number of dwelling units constructed when the Truman Administration, with every emergency power and millions of subsidy funds, was fumbling with the situation. We are deeply concerned with a long-range program increasing still further the number of homes to be constructed, but such a program involves serious complications and differences of opinion which cannot be dealt with adequately at this special session.

Text of Truman Message

the Congress not to be distracted from these central purposes.

At the same time, as I have stated, the Congress can and should act on certain other important items of legislation at this special session.

There are still other problems of great moment which vitally affect the welfare of the Nation. I have discussed them in previous messages to this Congress. I have made recommendations for legislation to meet them. I do not repeat them now—because the purposes and limited time of this special session do not readily permit action on them.

HOWEVER, I feel just as strongly as ever that all of these measures are necessary If the Congress finds time to enact any of them now the country will greatly benefit. Certainly, the next Congress should take them up immediately.

These include: A comprehensive health program, based on health insurance; a fair and sound labor-management relations law—in place of the Taft-Hartley law which has proved to be unfair and unsound and which should be repealed; a real long-range farm program; a stronger reciprocal trade agreements act; a universal training program; a national science foundation; strengthened anti-trust laws, and approval of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty.

The vigor of our democracy is judged by its ability to take decisive actions—actions which are necessary to maintain our physical and moral strength and to raise our standards of living. In these days of continued stress, the test of that vigor becomes more and more difficult. The legislative and executive branches of our Government can meet that test today.

The American people rightfully expect us to meet it together. I hope that the American people will not look to us in vain.

Thurmond to Take 4th Party Helm At Houston Rally

Columbia, S. C., July 27 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond said today he would officially accept the States' rights presidential nomination at Houston, Tex., August 11.

The occasion, he added, will be a Texas rally of States' rights Democrats.

Thurmond also told a news conference that President Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York are losing ground.

He explained that he had received offers of support from Dutchess County, N. Y., Dewey's home, and from Kansas City, Mo., the President's home county.

Southern Filibuster Looms in Senate

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

GOP Congressional leaders last night picked up President Truman's "Turnip Day" challenge by scheduling antipoll tax legislation for immediate consideration.

The move is sure to touch off a bitter filibuster led by enraged Southerners in the President's own party.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said the majority party may call the bill up today or Thursday.

May Start Today

This, in all probability, means the filibuster will start today.

In order to delay even calling the bill up, Southerners can make a series of time-consuming motions to amend and correct the official journal of yesterday's proceedings.

According to Senate parliamentary procedure these motions are not subject to cloture, the method by which the Senate can limit debate.

President Truman, a former Senator himself, said the Republicans could invoke cloture if they really wanted to pass civil rights legislation. But until the motions to amend the journal are out of the way, cloture cannot be applied.

Strategy Not Disclosed

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) a leader of the 22-man Southern Democratic bloc in the Senate, declined to disclose his group's particular strategy in advance.

He added, however, "You can be sure we will utilize every parliamentary resource to make sure the fallacies of this legislation are thoroughly brought home to the people of the United States."

Russell said that so far as he knew there is only one member of the Senate in favor of the poll tax as such. He and the others in the Southern bloc, he said, are opposed to poll taxes, which Georgia has dropped, but believe it is a matter for the States, either individually or by constitutional amendment, to consider.

President Truman deliberately played down his civil rights proposals yesterday and put anti-inflation and housing bills first. Civil rights came last.

The Republicans, however, who have charged the Chief Executive called the special session to give himself "a political sounding board," point to the fact that of all the President's proposals only the antipoll tax bill is ready for instant consideration in the Senate.

The decision of the joint leadership conference still must be ratified by the Republican conference when it meets today. Taft acknowledged there is strong sentiment among Republicans for an immediate adjournment, but the decision of the leadership is expected to prevail.

Recess Today Possible

Unless they decide to bring the poll tax legislation to the floor today instead of Thursday, the GOP leadership will try to avoid the time-consuming amendments to the Journal by recessing today instead of adjourning.

But anyway the decision goes, Mr. Truman's legislative program is bound to be tied up in knots.

While the Senate, which has unlimited debate unless cloture is invoked, is embroiled in the filibuster, the House will take short recesses while committees consider other bills.

The Southerners have chosen Senator John C. Stennis, scholarly 47-year-old lawyer from Mississippi, to lead off their "prolonged debate" against the antipoll tax measure.

Stennis, who took office less than a year ago, was the principal opponent of the bill when it was before the Senate Rules Committee.

Executive Orders Assailed

The President's executive orders Monday setting up an FEPC in the civil service and establishing an advisory committee for "equality of treatment and opportunity" in the armed services added fresh fuel to Southern fires of resentment.

Russell termed the orders "an act of unconditional surrender to the third party of Henry A. Wallace."

He said there was no question that Mr. Truman was "making a play to draw back into the Democratic Party the radical fringe surrounding Wallace."

Russell insisted that both orders bow to the "treasonable civil disobedience campaign" organized by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Pullman Car Porters, AFL.

If so, the orders already have failed of effect.

Randolph, national chairman of the League for Non-Violent Civil Disobedience Against Military Segregation, said last night that even under the President's order Negroes will still be segregated.

Randolph Reaffirms Stand

Just as the Southern Democrats in Congress, Randolph labelled the order "a misleading move, obviously made for political purposes and deliberately calculated to obscure the issue of segregation and to confuse the people at home and abroad."

Randolph again called upon Negro and white youths to refuse to register for the draft unless segregation is abolished in the armed forces.

Randolph's campaign, which has brought stern warning of "treason" even from Congressional liberals, has not met with any considerable support from the Negro press of this country.

Protestant Group Picks G. L. Archer

Glenn L. Archer, dean of the law school, Washburn University, Topeka, Kans., has been named executive secretary of "Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State."

Archer

In accepting the office yesterday, Archer, who is a Methodist, declared that neither he nor POAU will engage in any form of "religious bigotry."

"We aim to inform the public concerning the constitutional principle of separation of church and state," he declared. He said encroachments on equal rights for all, "whether by Protestants or Catholics," will be the concern of POAU.

The organization's main function is educational. Among other things, however, it is seeking the withdrawal of Myron C. Taylor as President Truman's Special Emissary to the Vatican.

He is resigning at the law school to take his new post.

Kerr Leading In Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, July 27 (AP).—Former Gov. Robert S. Kerr took an early lead tonight over Gomer Smith, former Congressman, for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in scattered returns from the Oklahoma runoff primary election.

With 2505 precincts out of 3695 reported, the count was Kerr 113,833, Smith 87,911.

Kerr polled 135,787 in the first primary to Smith's 73,511, but failed to get a majority of all votes cast in that 10-way contest.

Representative Rizley of Guymon won the Republican senatorial nomination in the first Oklahoma primary July 6. The incumbent Republican Senator, E. H. Moore of Tulsa, was not a candidate.

Only one nomination to a House seat was at stake in today's runoff. With 231 precincts of 501 in the Fourth District reported, Tom Steed, former Shawnee newspaperman, was leading former Representative Boren for the Democratic congressional nomination, 13,156 to 6202.

Vandenberg Unit To Review Wheat Treaty Thursday

Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) promised yesterday that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will "review the entire situation" involving the proposed international wheat treaty, which President Truman insisted the Senate should ratify.

Vandenberg called a meeting of his committee for Thursday, noting that the treaty was the only foreign policy matter submitted in the President's message yesterday which requires Senate action.

"We find ourselves in a quandary to know how we can now act upon a treaty which, by its own terms and interpretation, had to be ratified prior to July 1. The problem is further complicated by the withdrawal of previous ratifications by five comittees, including two important wheat producers, since July 1. Meanwhile, we confront the basic contemplation that a new subject of this highly important and complicated character must have time for full consideration since it involves, among other things the liability for large export subsidiaries.

Slight Decline In Meat Prices Is Expected

Consumer resistance to steep sales tags is expected to result in a mild decline in meat prices over the weekend, a survey of dealers indicated yesterday. But nobody expects the decline to last.

Packers, wholesalers and jobbers—not to speak of dealers—agreed that the demand in the last few days has been "very, very low" because prices have been 'too high."

Consequently, some retailers said they might buy their supplies at lower prices this week and this reduction may be reflected in lower prices for weekend marketing.

Most retailers queried, however, said they "don't know yet" what their weekend price picture will be.

Sidney Kolker, chairman of the food group of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, warned that reports show the "market is strengthening up again." He anticipated the spiral will start upward as soon as the current surplus is depleted.

Members of Congress, like housewives, were getting a first-hand look at the price situation—in their own restaurants.

Case Proposes Changes In DP's Bill

Representative Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.) introduced a bill yesterday to wipe out allegedly discriminatory features of the 1948 displaced persons law.

President Truman has attacked the present act, recently passed, as discriminatory against both Jews and Catholics.

The present law provides for admission of 202,000 displaced persons in two years; Mr. Truman would admit 402,000 in four years.

The Case bill would eliminate the clause requiring that 30 per cent of the displaced persons admitted be agricultural workers.

It would provide that displaced persons be allowed entry in accord with the proportions of various national groups that are found in the refugee camps of Europe.

And it would change from December 22, 1945, to April 21, 1947, the final date on which a person must have entered a camp to be eligible for entry into this country.

The Gallup Poll

Food Cost Rise Spotlights Truman Demand for Controls

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 27.—President Truman's renewed demand to Congress for inflation controls comes at a time when the food bill of the average American family is more than double what it was six years ago.

A good part of that increase has come in the past eleven months because since last August more than $200 has been added to the yearly cost of food for the typical nonfarm family.

The institute since 1942 has been keeping tabs on how much people spend for food. On four occasions interviewers throughout the country have asked this identical question of typical nonfarmer families:

"On the average, how much does your family spend on food, including milk, each week?"

The national median average, excluding farmers, for the four surveys shows this sharp and steady rise:

August, 1942	$11 per week
March, 1946	$17 per week
August, 1947	$21 per week
Today	$25 per week

This periodic survey by the institute differs from other cost-of-living figures, because it is based on what consumers in American cities say they actually pay out for food, while other indexes are based on the average retail price of a standard group of food products.

The commodity indexes also show a steady rise, of course, and for comparative purposes here are the figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics food index (based on 100 as the consumers average price paid for food during the 1935-1939 period):

April, 1942	119.6
March, 1946	140.1
June, 1947	190.5
June, 1948	214.1

An analysis of today's institute survey reveals some interesting sidelights on how soaring food prices have affected America's pocketbooks. For example, three times as many families today as in 1946 are spending over $30 a week for food. And today only every fifth family manages to stay under $15 weekly, whereas two years ago almost half the families were spending less than that amount.

Both economic and political implications can be drawn from the figures in today's survey. In the first place, a sizable boost in the family's food bill is bound to have an important effect on the amount of money the members spend for other things.

This is so because, while the average family income is higher than it has been at any time, it has not risen at as high a rate as the advance in food costs. This may account for the current business decline in the entertainment field, and may later affect other fields, if the food price spiral does not level off.

Politically, the soaring food budget focuses attention on Truman's battle with Congress over inflation controls and his attempt to place the blame for high prices on the Republican Party.

The Democratic candidate has chosen to fight the campaign on an issue which vitally interests the rank and file voters of the Nation. It is also an issue where his party enjoys certain advantages over the Republicans.

Previous institute surveys have shown that voters today regard high living costs as the most important domestic issue facing the Nation, rating it far above labor and housing problems. Also, a majority of voters believe that the Democratic Party can handle the problem of inflation better than the GOP.

More Than 1000 Attend Hospital Benefit in Rain

Despite a drizzling rain, more than 1000 persons last night attended the annual benefit of the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md.

Rain-socked adults and children, and others wearing raincoats and carrying umbrellas, wandered from booth to booth where ham and chicken salad sandwiches, homemade pie, cake and candy were served.

Highlights of the affair included a baseball game, pony rides, movies and entertainment by the Sandy Spring Melody Singers.

Forrestal Proposes Air Base Mergers

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal yesterday issued an order which observers said might lead to merger of Bolling Field and the Anacostia Naval Air Station, here.

The order did not specifically mention such union, but directed that a study be made by the Joint Chiefs of Staff on the feasibility of joint use of Air Force and Navy installations throughout the Nation.

Forrestal said present plans of the Air Force and the Navy to reopen bases now on a standby status and the fact that "both services now operate a number of installations in the same State" were primary causes for the order.

"I believe that a study should be made to determine the feasibility of joint occupation of air bases by units of the Navy and Air Force in those geographical areas where both plan to open new fields," he declared.

Similarly, he explained, he asked the Joint Chiefs of Staff to study possibility of combining operations at some bases already in use by the two services with a view to possible closing of some bases. He directed that report of the study be made to him by September 6.

Army Probes Guard Supply officer, who yesterday blasted the District Guard staff and supply set-up as "utterly incompetent and inefficient."

Colonel Myers is on "loan" to the District Guard as senior training instructor. The Second Army is responsible for the training of the Guardsmen in camp.

Just what might be accomplished by the report to the Army department was obscure since Colonel Myers himself stated that the District Guard is under the complete control of the White House and any changes in the top command must emanate from President Truman.

Virginia Men Equipped

Although District Guardsmen were plagued with a supply problem, 2400 guardsmen from Virginia breezed into camp without a mess kit or uniform missing. In fact they seemed to have a slight surplus to take care of emergencies. Included in the Virginia units is the 116th Infantry Regiment, which spearheaded the landings on Omaha Beach, Normandy.

District troops today were issued combat boots, uniforms and mess equipment, part of a 1000-pound load rushed here yesterday in a District Guard C-47 cargo plane by command of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox in answer to a complaint from Colonel Myers.

Myers and Col. Leroy S. Mann, commander of the District's 260th Antiaircraft Artillery group, declared that while the situation had improved they would not be satisfied "until every man has a change of uniform and sufficient mess equipment."

Maj. Fletcher F. Bernsdorff, District Guard supply officer, also came in for criticism at the hands of Myers.

Too Much Paper Work

"Half of the time of guard officers is spent in trying to get supplies from Major Bernsdorff," Myers said. He intimated that the supply officer was doing too much of the paper work singlehanded.

While the top command fought the "Battle of Messkits," District trainees appeared unconcerned about it all.

T/5 Joseph Marsden, 18, of 216 9th st. sw., looked up from a tray of hot dogs and sauerkraut at noon chow to say, "The chow is pretty good." Then, proudly patting his boot-clad foot, "I got my combat boots today."

Acting Corpl. Roger Nevels, 30, a veteran of the Ninth Division during the war, now employed as a supervisor with the Veterans Administration, said he "had eaten worse" in the Army. Pfc. John A. Hoffar, 30, a machinist, 3638 10th st. nw., now a jeep driver, spoke rather disparagingly of the "gelatine tomatoes and three small chunks of fat meat" he had for supper yesterday but in general he said he liked the training as "a change."

Mess Halls Too Small

Lieut. Col. Charles Yech, jr., acting executive officer, pointed out that "we are feeding 275 men in each of three mess halls that were designed for 180." He said field ranges were being installed to increase facilities.

Yesterday the District trainees, under a blazing sun, banged away with M-1 rifles, striving to qualify as marksmen, sharpshooters or experts.

Tomorrow the men will go on an eight-mile hike, following which they will receive instruction in chemical warfare and map reading. They will bivouac in the field all night.

Clouds of mosquitoes which plagued the troops on arrival received a setback yesterday when a C-47 cargo plane sprayed the camp with DDT-kerosene mixture. The operation was directed by Capt. Theodore Blakeslee, Langley Field entomologist.

Draft to Take Older Men First, Then Youths 19 to 21 Largely men must register, including veterans, unless they are on active duty in the armed services.

Hershey's decision to draft men by age group was announced after he held an hour-long unofficial conference with members of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees which worked up the draft law.

Both Chairman Gurney (R., S. Dak.) of the Senate committee and Chairman Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House committee agreed that the age plan is "fair and in accordance with the act."

They said yesterday's meeting with Hershey was not official and that the Congressmen acted purely in an advisory capacity. Actual administration of the draft, they said, was up to Hershey, recently named by President Truman to handle the peacetime draft as he did the wartime draft.

Complain at 161,000 Limit

Eighteen-year-olds continued to sign up for a one-year training program in the armed services. By law, only 161,000 may volunteer, thus escaping the 21-month draft when they become 19.

Complaints continued to come in from this group. Then teen-agers charge thaey are being squeezed out of a chance to volunteer and ask that more than 161,000 be accepted.

But Gurney offered them little hope. He said there isn't enough money to train more.

Meanwhile, the Army began to get ready to train the new draftees.

It closed down temporarily the Nation's first peacetime experiment in universal military training at Fort Knox, Ky.

Officials explained that the successful UMT experiment would be resumed around November 1, but in the meantime the Army needed the camp's personnel and facilities to train new inductees.

It added that many of the new and different training methods developed at Fort Knox would be used throughout the expanding Army.

Some of these include a religious program; a trainee court which lets the men themselves judge and mete out punishment for minor infractions and regulations; prohibition of profanity during training periods; and abolition of brow-beating through a leadership-trainee program.

Dugan Urges Politics Limit

Candidates for Arlington's Country Board should agree to keep "hands off politics" as far as the school board is concerned, County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said yesterday.

He listed that point as one of five to which he felt the current county board candidates should agree.

Dugan and Board Member Mrs. Florence Cannon voted against any cut in the school board's proposed budget last spring. Three members, however, voted for the budget slice.

According to Dugan, candidates also should:

1. Demand a referendum to let voters decide whether or no to make all county and school board elections nonpartisan.

2. Agree to appointment by the county board of a full-time tax assessor, a move Dugan said would require State legislation.

3. Vote to set up an Arlington Civil Services Commission covering all county employes.

4. Agree to work for enlarged Arlington police and fire departments.

Democratic candidates for the county board are incumbent Alfred Frisbie, Attorney Harold Schliz and Insurance Adjuster William Nemeth.

In addition, Builder I. Lee Potter has filled as independent candidate for the board, while Free Lance Writer Francis J. Clair, rejected as GOP candidate by the county committee, is expected to run as an independent.

U. S. Jets Fly Over Big German Cities

Berlin, July 27 (AP) The United States Air Force demonstrated its growing air strength to Germans in the American zone today by flying jet fighters over several cities.

The German press reported at the same time that the Russians were substantially increasing the force of fighter planes, including jets, in the Soviet zone surrounding Berlin.

The three western commanders in Berlin conferred on how to combat the Russian drive to turn the city's police force over to the Communists. By seeking to override the city government's authority to fire the Russian-appointed police chief, the Communists faced Berliners with the prospect of two police forces and two chiefs.

American and British cargo planes, meanwhile, flew new record tonnages to blockaded western Berlin despite posting of new Russian warnings of maneuvers by their fighters in air corridors traveled by the transports.

Markgraf Defies Dismissal

Police Chief Paul Markgraf, Moscow-trained German war hero, defied the anti-Communist city government's order dismissing him. He said he not only would remain in office, but would carry out Russian orders to fire Socialist Johannes Stumm, the deputy appointed as his successor.

There was growing uneasiness among the Germans over the Soviet-directed exchange of stamped money for newly printed bank notes. When the Russians introduced currency reform last month to meet western currency reform, they merely put a distinguishing stamp on the old Hitler mark while new money was being printed.

This money must be exchanged for new currency by Wednesday. More and more Berliners said they had trouble in getting an exchange. After standing in line for hours, many western sector residents were being told their money was "forged," the western-licensed press reported.

While Germans watched for the next western diplomatic step, American jet fighters zoomed over the American zone in what Air Force officers termed "familiarization" flights.

Four Cities See Jets

The 16 Shooting Star jets, which arrived in Germany Sunday, took off from Fuerstenfeldbruck field, near Munich. Four planes flew over Wiesbaden and Frankfurt and four more over Heidelberg and Stuttgart.

The British-licensed newspaper Telegraf reported increased Russian fighter strength at several fields. Die Welt, the British military government's official German language paper, said most Russian jets were based at Dessau, 75 miles southeast of Berlin.

German reports also told of large-scale Soviet army summer maneuvers in an area extending virtually the length of the Russian zone from the Baltic southward to Thuringia. The maneuvers were reported to involve huge 12-ton Stalin III tanks.

A poll of Berliners made public by the American military government, meanwhile showed faith in the Allied determination to remain in the beleaguered city.

The poll was a sampling of 300 people living in the three western sectors. They were almost unanimous in saying that the Allies were right in staying in Berlin. Only 1 per cent said the west was wrong.

Whereas last October only 74 per cent believed the Americans would stay in Berlin the percentage has jumped to 89.

New Strikes Threaten Italian Economy

Rome, July 27 (AP).—New strikes threatened the Italian economy tonight as eleventh-hour peacemakers strove to avert the break-up of the Italian General Confederation of Labor.

Labor leaders representing moderate and republican elements in the seven-million-member General Labor Confederation (CGIL) went before the new Catholic Workers' Association and urged them not to quit the confederation because of the use of "political strikes" by the CGIL's Communist leaders.

Decisions Appears Irrevocable

But the decision apparently was irrevocable. Christian Democrat leaders said last week the "revolutionary" strike called July 14 after an attempt on the life Communist leader, Palmiro Togliatti, violated the terms of labor's unity pact. The Communist-dominated CGIL executive committee today read the Christian Democrats out of the organization.

Workers of the Bank of Italy, run by the government, announced meanwhile they would quit for 24 hours Monday because of "indifference" to their demands for more money.

Milan dispatches said workers had seized the Catiglione copper products factory after it laid off 700 men, asserting banks would not allow the company to meet payrolls.

There were, however, a few bright spots:

1. A month-old strike seemed near solution.
2. A strike in the Isotta-Fraschini automobile plant over layoffs was reported settled with an agreement to send the men to school for six months to train them for other work.
3. CGIL and the Employers' Industrial Confederation were talking "amicably" about nation-wage level adjustments.
4. Unemployment was down in June for the first time this year.

U. S. Air Power Is Minimized

New York, July 27 (AP).—Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, head of the Air Defense Command, said today Americans should not be "overconfident" because of the newly authorized 70-group Air Force.

Too many people, he told the thirty-first annual convention of Lions International, believe such a force is an "overwhelming instrument."

"We must not forget that during World War II it was necessary to employ 243 groups of aircraft in our Air Force before our enemies were defeated," Stratemeyer asserted.

"In setting a figure of 70 groups, the Air Force was obviously planning for peace—not war."

The general said "the alternative to a peace through arbitration would be ghastly and costly," but added:

"Yet we must accept it as a possibility in this present period of international tension. Like the early settler of the West, we must walk down the street with both eyes open and our hands at our gun belt."

Gen. Markos Claims Defensive Victory

would come a battle of attrition in which the surrounded Partisans would be ground into extinction.

But the plan had miscarried, Markos said. In the Konitsa sector on the preceding day, he had witnessed an action at Molista where "we completely routed a brigade of the Ninth Division."

"All day," he said, "they tried to drive us from prepared positions on Mount Cliftis. Each time they were thrown back. At nightfall we counted 80 dead left on the field. More important, we captured 65,000 rounds of British ammuntion—enough to feed our rifles for 10 days.

"And this is how we get our supplies—not as Athens and the American claim, from Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania. We have not received a single cartridge from across the northern frontier. Believe me, if we had all the help Athens says we are getting from our neighbors the situation would be vastly different. With half the artillery and air support which the Fascists are getting from America we would be in Athens today instead of sitting here.

"Another pet fiction of Athens is that our troops when hard pressed flee into Albania only to turn up again at another point along the frontier. The charge that we violate the frontier is absolutely false. Athens used this charge to alibi the serious defeat at Mount Mourgana last March. They said we slipped into Albania and then fell on the flank of the Athens forces from across the border.

17 Interned In Albania

"Our troops were never in Albania; they would have been interned. Why, only the day before yesterday 17 of our men were obliged to cross the frontier. Albanians captured them, took away their arms and sent them into internment."

As for the present Greek army offensive, Markos said that by judicious economy in men and ammunition, he could persevere in the mountain area until the Greek army campaign collapsed through attrition of manpower or was bogged by autumn rains.

Actually his position regarding troop reserves and material stocks was better than a year ago, he said. An officers' training school had been established and the lack of combat leaders was less acute. Partisans, he said, had learned valuable lessons in the art of infiltration. He recalled his worst months were August and September, 1946. Then there were few trained officers, bad organization and desperate shortages of food and weapons. Diligent plunder of the stores of the Greek army and of the national guard had provided ample reserves, he said.

Markos estimated the Greek army was currently employing 70,000 men in its grand offensive on three fronts.

Credits Enemy With 1 Success

"Their only success has been south of Nestorion, where one column advanced 3½ kilometers (about 2 miles) and succeeded on the twelfth day in taking Mount Ondria and Hill 1516. Neither of these mountains is of critical importance and their loss in no way embarrasses us.

"This campaign is part of the general offensive planned by the Americans that began in Epirus in March. With 15,000 to 20,000 soldiers, they tried to drive us from the Mount Mourgana sector. There were two battles—from March 27 to April 24. The result was the enemy lost two battalions in killed and wounded. We took 180 prisoners.

"Even the American Gen. (James A.) Van Fleet admitted failure," Markos continued. "Had they won Mourgana the enemy would immediately have attacked our positions here. But first they wanted an easy success. So with 35,000 troops they attacked our groups at Roumel, on April 14. In an action lasting until May 31, they suffered 1800 casualties. We had only 800 men in the area yet General Tsakalotos, the Fascist area commander, says we lost 2000.

"No doubt 2000 were killed in the Roumel area. We captured an order of Tsakalotos directing his troops to kill civilians. Thus at Stronme 80 children of Partisans were slain by Fascists, while at other villages women and old men were slaughtered."

Admits Konitsa Defeat

I reminded Markos of his defeat at Konista last December and the generally accepted theory that his failure to capture Konista for the capital of his government had prompted Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Soviet Russia to delay recognition.

"Yes, we were defeated at Konista" Markos conceded. "But Konista was only a phase of a clearing operation that was generally successful. Remember that when we launched that operation last September we were in possession only of the immediate area around Mount Grammos. We failed at Konista but we liberated 6000 square kilometers of territory—the whole of the Grammos and upper Pindus regions."

Markos was unwilling to speculate on the reasons why his government remains unrecognized by the Soviet Union.

"Recognition is a matter for those governments to weigh," he said. "Meanwhile we must continue to fight for recognition—both by our friends and our enemies. We will have a capital in Greece and very soon."

Again referring to the help from the Slav countries, Markos said, "We keep hearing that our northern neighbors are collecting funds for food and medical supplies, but so far none of this stuff has reached us. Of course, we want all the help we can get, but we are doing pretty well with our present resources."

Would Still Talk Peace

Discussing his peace overture of a month ago, Markos said that despite its frigid reception by Athens he remained willing to discuss cessation of the civil war with any "sincere" group.

He complained the civil war would have ended months ago were it not for the Anglo-American support. "Without American dollars and munitions the Athens regime would be impotent," he said. "But reconciliation is impossible so long as Americans are fanning the flames and inciting further bloodshed. The first practical step toward the pacification of Greece must be the prompt withdrawal of American occupiers.

"Our only ambition is that Greece be delivered from civil war. The Greek people must decide for themselves in a free election the kind of Government they want. We do not desire to impose our will forcibly on the people.

"We do not hate Americans—we recognize them as decent democratic people misled by Truman. We want good relations with America. We desire American help in the peaceful reconstruction of our country. We don't want American bombs and bullets."

Markos promised that any American officers captured during the fighting would be set free. He said he had seen no qualitative improvement in the Greek army under American advisers. It was bigger and there were more guns, but the morale was, if anything, lower than before, he said. He had noticed no difference in tactics. "Our Partisan tactics," he boasted, "turn upside down every new thing they attempt."

If the Communists come to power two members of the present Greek Parliament, Gonatas and Zervas, will be tried as war criminals "for acts of collaboration during the wartime occupation," Markos said. "As for the others, the Greek people will decide what to do with them."

Gives Personal History

Markos filled in a few facts of his little-known personal history. Born 41 years ago in Asia Minor, he migrated to Greece in 1922, held a variety of small jobs in Salonika, then helped organize the tobacco workers union as one of the main props of Communist strength. He was arrested six times, serving a total of nearly five years in jail. The German invasion found him in exile on the island of Gavdos, whence he escaped and joined the ELAS resistance movement. Asked how he became leader of the partisans, he replied smiling, "By fighting."

He listed the present cabinet as follows: Markos, president and War Minister; Ionnides, vice president and Minister of the Interior; Roussos, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Barjiotas, Minister of Economics; Professor Kokalis, Health; Porphyrogenis, Justice; Stringos, Supply; Viandas, Agriculture. All are Communists except Professor Kokalis, who regards himself as politically independent.

At present his cabinet is scattered on "war missions" through Partisan-held territory. Only Roussos was with Markos today. The former editor of the Communist Party organ "Rizospastic" still look gaunt and sallow despite the rough outdoor life he is obliged to lead. He admitted wryly that as foreign minister of an unrecognized state his official functions were limited. He said he had made one trip outside Greece—to the unity congress of the Hungarian Communist and Social Democratic parties in Budapest a month ago, which he attended not as foreign minister but simply as a representative of the Greek Communist Party.

Greeks Seek To Recapture Key Heights

Athens, July 27 (AP).—Greek army units fought today to recapture a 6000-foot height from which they were driven by 12 guerilla counterattacks, the Greek general staff said.

The general staff said a fierce struggle is going on at the summit of Kleptis Height, the key to the northern Smolikas Mountains in the Grammos area. The army captured the height and held it for two hours yesterday, but was driven off by fanatically battling rebels.

Kleptis, the primary block on the Konista-Smolikas front, is preventing a junction of the ninth and second divisions moving toward each other in an attempt to cut guerilla forces in two.

Greek Rebel Boats Attack Turkish Vessels

Ankara, Turkey, July 27 (U.P.).—Two Greek guerilla motor boats attacked Turkish motor boats in the Gulf of Saros, near the Dardanelles, but were driven off after a gun fight, a government source said today.

Three Lebanese Jews Wounded by Grenade

Beirut, Lebanon, July 27 (U.P.).—Three Jews were wounded by flying glass today when unidentified persons threw a hand grenade into the heavily guarded Jewish quarter here, authorities reported.

Decisive Blow Urged on Jews If Truce Fades

Tel Aviv, Israel, July 27 (AP).—David Ben-Gurion, Israel's prime minister, told his people today "we must be prepared on land, sea and air to deliver a decisive blow to the enemy if war breaks out."

The white-haired leader said, "We cannot tell whether this second truce is the end of the war or a passing intermission."

Ben-Gurion spoke on the forty-fourth anniversary of the death of Theodore Herzl, Viennese journalist who fathered the Zionist movement.

He said today's Israeli army, the first Jewish military force in 1300 years, was a direct result of Herzl's writings.

Jerusalem outside the old city, he added, is more a Jewish city than at any time "since the destruction of the second temple."

Earlier in the day Israel's army, navy and airforce staged a full-dress parade through Tel Aviv's streets.

[The United Press reported five British employes of a Jerusalem firm were charged before a Tel Aviv magistrate Tuesday with espionage and were ordered held for 15 days with the promise of release if evidence is not produced. The suspects are all employed by the Jerusalem Electric Corp.]

Iraq Won't Pump Oil If Jews Retain Plants

Baghdad, Iraq, July 27 (AP).—An Iraqui official said today Iraq will not resume pumping oil to Haifa if the Jews retain control of the refineries there.

Dr. Nadim Alpachaci, Iraqi director-general of economics, said his nation would resume the pipeline exports only if the refineries are under international control.

Fritz Bernstein, Israel's minister of commerce and indstry, said in Haifa Sunday the Jews had seized the refineries, owned by the Anglo-American and Shell companies, "to insure necessary supplies for Israel and to battle against oil sanctions."

Opera Returns

It has been 17 long years since the Metropolitan Opera visited Washington. The opera famine since then has not been total because of the several appearances of the Philadelphia La Scala, not to speak of a few local efforts. But generally the lack of suitable auditorium and staging facilities has made Washington a place to be shunned by the first-rate companies in this important field of music. The longtime dearth of real opera here makes all the more significant and welcome the festival to be put on by the new Lyric Opera Association at the Watergate for 12 days beginning August 4. By utilizing the magnificent outdoor theater there, this company will avoid the usual inadequacies of Washington concert halls.

As Paul Hume noted in The Washington Post Sunday, not the least of the benefits of the new group is the opportunity it affords rising young singers. But the Lyric Opera Association is no amateur affair. It will draw upon many Metropolitan stars for lead roles, and its direction has received high praise. But the greatest benefit is to the people of Washington. By bringing a standard repertoire at low prices, the new company will give thousands of Washingtonians who might not otherwise have it an opportunity to hear good opera competently sung. As the outlook for the legitimate theater darkens, it is encouraging that Washington's cultural life will be enriched by a summer opera season which, with proper appreciation, may become a regular event.

Fair Employment

President Truman's twin executive orders providing for equality of treatment and opportunity in Federal employment are undoubtedly of value as a declaration of public policy. They lay down a line for, or at any rate give a clue to, his subordinates in the executive agencies of the Government, military and civilian alike. As such, they are altogether praiseworthy. Their usefulness, however, must be weighed in terms of their application. They appear to be at once vague in outline and weak in administrative implementation.

The order respecting the armed services, for example, declares it to be the "policy of the President that there shall be equality of treatment and opportunity for all persons in the armed services without regard to race, color, religion or national origin," yet says not a word about abolishing the racial segregation now in force. As Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, remarked, "There can be no equality with a segregated pattern." It will not be easy to do away with a system of segregation long established, and perhaps it cannot be abandoned at a single stroke. But a beginning must be made at once and a program must be laid down for speedy integration of white and colored elements of the armed forces at all levels if the President's declaration of policy is to have real meaning. The test will lie in the promptness and efficacy with which the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force put the policy into practice.

So far as the civilian agencies of the Government are concerned, the President's order comes as a timely reaffirmation of a policy already in operation. One could wish that the Fair Employment Board to be established in the Civil Service Commission were accorded, like the wartime FEPC, more power to initiate investigation of unfair employment practices; the President's order places rather too much burden upon victims of discrimination, leaving the board little scope beyond the review of appeals. Nevertheless, the order should serve to jog the consciences of all Federal administrators.

Newfoundland

Results in last week's Newfoundland referendum are too close to indicate any marked preference for joining Canada. A slight majority (52 per cent, according to an almost complete count) expressed themselves as favoring union, whereas the remaining 48 per cent voted for self-government. The clearest conclusion to be drawn from this and the earlier plebiscite held June 3 is that the people of the oldest British colony are determined to return to some form of responsible government. A third choice, continuation of the present commission form of government, ran last in the June 3 voting.

The large vote for the return of self-government was cited by a number of Newfoundland leaders as the first step in obtaining economic union with the United States. This attachment is easily explained. American air bases in Newfoundland and Labrador brought a bonanza of dollars during the war, and Newfoundland remains strategically situated on the air route to Europe. Moreover, Newfoundland and Labrador contain minerals in which this country is interested. Fishing, the main industry, links Newfoundland with New England, and many Newfoundlanders, moreover, have relatives in the United States. That bond often makes this country seem closer than French-speaking Quebec, but for which the vote for union with Canada, doubtless, would have been larger.

A 4 per cent margin in favor of joining Canada is not great, but, in view of Newfoundland's interest in economic union with the United States, in view also of the increasing closeness of the Canadian-American tie, the Canadians may look favorably upon the incorporation of Newfoundland within the Canadian federation. Such a move away from particularism would be encouraging to the development of a wider North American community. Time and the state of the world are, in fact, nudging free peoples everywhere to federate.

Abandoned Wives

Mr. Ernest Bevin told the House of Commons the other day that there is nothing more he can do about getting the Russian-born wives of British subjects out of Russia and so reunite them with their husbands. Mr. Bevin said he had "used all the pressure I can" and that the whole effort is hopeless. When Sir Thomas Moore, a Tory, said he considered this to be "a policy of defeat," Mr. Bevin snapped back at him: "Are you suggesting that I should declare war, or something of that kind?" What answer, if any, Sir Thomas may have given has not been reported, but Mr. Bevin's statement seems a pretty plain indication that the romantic age is over at last. There are said to be a dozen of these Russo-British wives, and doubtless all of them are beautiful; but altogether they are not worthy of having a single bomber or guided missile launched for their rescue.

We ourselves are obliged to agree with Mr. Bevin that the rescue of a dozen ladies in distress is perhaps not as sound a reason for going to war as the annexation of new territories or the preservation of trade interests or any of the various other reasons preferred by statesmen nowadays. Still, we cannot help contrasting Mr. Bevin's attitude with that of the Chilean government which has interned 25 assorted Soviet subjects, mostly minor diplomats and MVD agents, as hostages for the Russian-born daughter-in-law of the former Chilean Ambassador to Moscow. The Chilean government considered the refusal of the Kremlin to permit Dona Lydia de Cruz Ocampo and her small son to leave Russia a sufficient reason for breaking diplomatic relations with the Soviets. About two months ago Senor Santa Cruz, the Chilean delegate to the United Nations, denounced the Russian practice of detaining native wives of foreigners as a flagrant violation of human rights, and demanded intervention. The matter has been placed on the agenda of the Assembly and is to be taken up at the meeting in Paris next month, though there is no reason to suppose that the Russians will be impressed by that.

The difference between Mr. Bevin's attitude and that of the Chilean government may be explained, according to one's prejudices, either by the relative distance (a) of the two countries from the Soviet sphere of military operations, or (b) between the phlegmatic Anglo-Saxon and the chivalric Castilian temperaments. Anyway, it is a matter in which the head agrees with Mr. Bevin and the heart with Sir Thomas and the Chileans.

Foreign Service

The movement to give District government employes the pay raise that was denied them in the closing hours of the last session of Congress ought, out of fairness, to be extended to include another group of employes in the same boat. The 6000 members of the Foreign Service, who are Government employes under any definition, were excluded from the $330 Federal pay increase because of a flaw in the language of the act. The exclusion was one of legal interpretation rather than intent. Backers of the legislation thought the Foreign Service was covered, but a dispute over the tense of a verb led the eagle-eyed General Accounting Office to rule against it. Accordingly, we believe, Congress has an obligation now to make amends. The members of the Foreign Service have an importance beyond their numbers as America's eyes and ears abroad, and it is imperative that the service become a corps of the best qualified representatives rather than a luxury reserved for the rich. This condition, no less than elementary justice, demands that members of the Foreign Service be accorded equality of treatment with other Federal employes.

Inflation: A Money Problem

We shall give the President the benefit of the doubt, and hazard that he wants legislation, not an election debate. To be sure, the record for November was in his mind when he listed his monumental agenda. He knows there is no earthly chance that the special session will or can encompass all the items he proffers. But Mr. Truman virtually admits this, for he says that his primary concern is with anti-inflation and housing. If Congress finds time to enact any of the other measures he names, well and good, but he urges Congress not to be "distracted from" the "central purpose" of his special message.

New housing based on new credit creation may seem inconsistent with an anti-inflation program. No industry is in such a state of inflation as is the construction industry. It is at the peak of performance. To a shortage of building materials is combined a critical shortage of construction workers, and prices, in consequence, are skyhigh. In these circumstances the reenactment of Title VI as part of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Act would help inflation more than construction. Prices would go up, but not houses. Yet the case for housing for veterans is irresistible on social grounds. The way out of the dilemma, it seems to us, is to make room for the new demand by putting a brake on existing demand. Nonresidential housing, in other words, should be put under restraint. This might be done by the setting up of an Issues Control Board or agreement among the States to hold down public construction. Another way is by allocation of materials so as to give veteran housing first choice, and this way constitutes the fifth point in the President's program, though it is not spelled out precisely in this form.

But in general the method of dealing with inflation does not lie in goods controls. Inflation is too much money competing for too few goods. The Nation is fully employed in turning out goods, so that, unless featherbedding can be eliminated and productivity increased, the basic remedy is not to be sought on the side of more goods. It is the excess of money that is the root cause of the trouble. It arose, of course, from the financing of the war by the bond issues which left the Nation with an inflated public debt as the basis of the Nation's credit supply. Nothing has been done since the war to correct this condition. To be sure, there has been a contraction in the public debt of about 26 billion dollars, but, with the last tax bill, debt reduction has ended. And what already has been done has been offset by an expansion instead of a decline in bank loans and other forms of credit, notably for the purchase of real estate and consumer goods. It is the money supply, to repeat, that begs the combined attention of Administration and Congress.

In great part the Truman recommendations would meet the inflation issue in terms of the basic reason for it. But some of the proposals on the money side are not the money-absorbers they seem. The reestablishment of an excess profits tax, for instance, might not turn a Treasury deficit into a surplus, as the President says it would. Managements might revert to the wartime practice of distributing a greater share of earnings in the form of salaries and other emoluments to workers and officers. This practice would add to, not subtract from, the money stream, and might pave the way, moreover, to the inefficiency of production which keeps prices high. A strong smell arises from this item, which did not figure in last year's proposals, of 1948 politics.

This is not the case with the item providing for the restoration of control over installment buying of consumer goods, a control that should never have been dropped. In this respect Congress disregarded the President's recommendation of last November. Since then the volume of consumer credit has increased, and though the rise is not alarming, an acceleration has lately set in. This credit adds that much more to the money competition for goods which puts up their price. Soothing assurances from bankers that the credit volume is not excessive should not deter legislators from their duty in this respect of protecting the housewife's dollar.

By far the most important anti-inflation item is the recommendation "that the Federal Reserve Board be given greater authority to regulate inflationary bank credit." This is a repetition of the first item in last November's plan. But the President never made up his own mind about the best way to realize his own recommendation. The Federal Reserve Board knew the answer. Chairman Eccles proposed the means in the form of special reserve requirements, yet he got no support, and, indeed, was eventually dropped from the chairmanship! In this respect the Administration has only two choices: either the Eccles plan of "braking" borrowing or making borrowing more expensive. The second course could be accomplished by the withdrawal of official support of Government bonds at present levels which would have the effect of increasing the general interest rate. The choice is difficult. But the recommendation of the President has no meaning unless one or the other has been decided upon. To this recommendation should have been added a means for encouraging the locking up of some part of inflation incomes in savings.

If steps to control the money stream were taken, there would be no need to tinker with either rationing or price control. It is, of course, in foods that prices have skyrocketed, but no system of rationing meat, for example, could be set up within four months. And the system is bound to be so complicated and so hard to apply in this continent of a country that the beneficiary in all probability would be the black market and not the consumer. The meat shortage is due to the inordinate marketings in the fall of 1947. Another factor is what has been called "the cost of high living," meaning the increase in demand arising from the increase in meat-eating arising from the general prosperity. The object of legislation should be general and not particular control. If this can be enacted, the economy might be kept on an even keel, the achievement of which is as necessary in keeping the peace as it is in preventing economic collapse. The President tuned his message, it seems to us, on the maintenance of our economic stability, rather than on the maintenance of himself in office. The Republicans would be making a sad mistake from the nation's as well as from the party's standpoint if they failed to treat the message with more seriousness than is evident in the initial comments.

German Army

Could it be that Mr. Carter (letter published July 22) doesn't realize the ultimate results of his suggestion, or is he attempting to sugarcoat the distasteful proposal recently advanced that we hire aliens to do our fighting for us?

It seems an obvious conclusion that if a German army were formed, even with supreme control and supply in the hands of the American Army, Germany would then have to be accorded the position of an ally with its attendant prestige rather than that of a lately defeated enemy.

As a result, the danger to ourselves from a German army formed against the "common enemy" becomes apparent. I think a case in point is the position of Russia today who not so many years ago was materially aided by this country in her struggle against the "common enemy." Add to this fact the rather fundamental militarism of the German race as a whole and I think that the final resul perhaps 25 or 30 years hence is all too obvious.

E. M. BROWN, JR.
Charlottesville, Va.

. . . I have not forgotten that it was long the scheme of the top Nazis to pit East against West, that they plotted to instigate a showdown between the "corrupt pluto-democracies" and the "Communist barbarians," confidently expecting that when each should have exhausted itself in such a war, the clever and superior Master Race could then, at small expense to itself, take over the earth and carry through easily its design to enslave or exterminate all the "inferior peoples," thus ushering in the glorious 1000 years of absolute tyranny Hitler predicted.

So soon after this Nation poured out its youth and treasure to defeat this threat to civilization, so soon after the devastation of much of Europe and Asia we are now trying to repair with ECA, so soon after the liberating armies exposed to the world Germany's secret shame of gas chambers and murder camps—that someone should dare to suggest the reorganizing and rearming of those forces which twice in a single generation cost us a terrible price in blood, sweat and tears, is hard to believe.

Tuberculosis Care

While the 500,000 cases of tuberculosis in the United States represent only about 3/100 per cent of the national population, the 6401 cases reported as a result of the city-wide X-ray chest survey, as show i. The Washington Post of July 10, represent slightly more than 7/100 per cent of the city's population, if the most recent estimate of 861,000 be valid. This poses an acute local problem, especially when reliable sources have reported that the United States is between 40,000 and 75,000 short on beds for tuberculosis patients.

Even with modern facilities for tuberculotherapy, the disease accounted for 4,500,000 deaths from 1904 until quite recently. As to our present deficient facilities, the cost of adequate hospital care directly estimated at $14.48 daily, puts it far beyond the reach of the unfortunate poor. Dr. L. J. Roner, Virginia State Health Commissioner, announced on June 18 that paying patients at Virginia's three State tuberculosis sanatoria would pay 50 cents more per diem for treatment after July 1 last.

It is only by looking into foreign parts can we gain relief from our dire situation. For instance, Max Jordan writes in The Tablet, May 22 issue, that proper authorities have estimated that cases of tuberculosis in Germany aggregate one million; that 152,000 people died of the disease in Germany in 1946; that the average rate of deaths now caused by the disease run at a rate of 200,000 annually in comparison with the prewar 42,000 annual rate for the country!

Orden, Sinarquista organ, reports of a situation in Mexico wherein eight and nine persons occupy the same hospital room, not ward.

If the incidence of maladies is highest among the poorest the medical needs of the country are obvious. These needs are urgent and will not long go neglected. John L. Lewis' tongue was considerably sharpened during his recent contract negotiations with the mine operators because of an inadequate national policy of social security.

Armies In Germany

Sumner Welles in his column of July 20 urges strenuously that all the armies of occupation of Germany should remain there. Again we have the perfect illustration of the age-old thinking of the decrepit State Department "mind" which has gotten us into the predicament we are now in. Not withdraw the armies?

The withdrawal of all the armies is the only chance for any kind of a beginning of a peace. And nonwithdrawal means we will be thrown out, a war with Russia and the final possession of all of Europe by Russa.

Negotiate now quickly, to withdraw all armies. This is now our only slim hope for peace.

New York Divorces

I was very interested in the July 24 letter from a "Victim" which shed light on New York's present-day puritanical divorce laws.

It's hard to believe that in this modern day of one divorce in three marriages, that a sovereign State, as advanced and progressive as the Empire State, would utterly refuse to give legal sanction to the growing trend toward trial marriages. There apparently still exists in the State of New York, the possibility that a person, who undertakes the vows of matrimony, may encounter considerable difficulty in shaking free. What a chance young couples must take now-a-days.

Worse than that, however, is the fact, brought out by your correspondent, that those contemplating divorce must even "cook up" a false "adultery" scene to give validity to the procedure. If there is any one inalienable democratic ideal it is this: that no State has the right to maintain laws which force free peoples into the position of having to perjure themselves before a civil court.

It is enough to have to take a sacred vow to cherish one another until death do you part in order to get married in the first place. To have to flout a State law in addition makes it a double offense.

It's high time the citizens of New York rise up and bring to an end such outmoded laws. With Governor Dewey as the Republican candidate for President this could well become an important issue in the coming campaign.

The Ubiquitous Blonde

So now a "beautiful blonde" heroine, though incognito, has been found in the current spy-story thriller and all that is needed to complete the cast is a dark, dangerous, sinister brunette villainess.

We await the next exciting installments in succeeding releases with palpitating interest.

The U. N. And World Law

The latter part of Walter Lippmann's column of July 22 contains a penetrating statement relating to the problem of a settlement with Russia. He says "the essence of a settlement of a great conflict is not that the antagonists have decided they think alike and can trust each other, but that they have accepted conditions which make it too dangerous and too unprofitable for either to take the risk of upsetting the settlement . . . For they (the terms of the settlement) rest, not on that community of ideas and principles which one might hope for, though as yet in vain, but on a balance of power which no one is able, and therefore no one dares, to challenge."

Mr. Lippmann has here described with deadly accuracy the necessary character of any settlement or agreement between the United States and Russia. Mutual fear, rather than cooperation and good faith, is the adhesive which binds all settlements between rival nations.

It is the prospect of maintaining, in this atmosphere of anxiety and apprehension, the necessary balance of power once the settlement is reached, that dismays me even more than the problem of arriving at a settlement before war occurs. It seems to me that long periods of peace such as we have experienced in the past through a balance of power are no longer possible.

Therefore, all the ingenuity which might be brought to bear in the creation of a satisfactory settlement today would nevertheless result merely in a short postponement of war, a breathing space during which each side could continue to work feverishly to better its position, thus eventually destroying the equilibrium.

The flaw in all settlements based on balance of power of the parties is their impermanence. Moreover, the present-day life expectancy of such agreements has diminished to the point where they seem scarcely worth the effort put into their negotiation and attainment.

The way in which agreements between private citizens or corporate bodies within a state are enforced is by public law and its enforcement agents. There is no parallel to this structure at the international level. For, as Sir Alfred Zimmern has pointed out, "whatever 'international law' is, it most assuredly is not law in the sense that the ordinary law-abiding citizen understands the term." Real world law has not yet been established.

There seems to be little question in anyone's mind but that a regime of enforceable world law, once established, would be infinitely safer and more pleasant to live under than a precarious, explosive balance of power. If this is the case, why cannot our major objective encompass the necessary transformation of the U. N. as well as the achievement of a settlement of the great areas of friction?

God knows the transformation of the U. N. would require more than the wave of a conjuror's wand. It would demand greater effort of imagination and greater self-control than even the difficult task of formulating settlement terms.

In the face of our knowledge of modern weapons of mass destruction and the probabilities of their early employment, it seems incredible to me—and surely to many others—that our Government is making no immediate practical effort to establish law and order on the world level. Only two weeks ago our Government clearly revealed its disinclination to take such steps by opposing 19 members of the Little Assembly who voted in favor of a resolution requiring the General Assembly at Paris to consider calling a Charter revision conference.

Since the Little Assembly's resolution was adopted despite our opposition, there is still time for our Government, pessimistic as it may be about the chances for adequate Charter revision, to formulate and promote a positive policy and program for Charter reform. May our policy-makers heed the words of James Russell Lowell who said, "Not failure but low aim is the crime." MARGARET DUDLEY.

Price Gripers Vs. Inflation

By Malvina Lindsay

New Rich Problem

PEOPLE ARE getting "madder and madder" about prices, the conversation of the day reveals. But will they ever do anything more than talk? Will their sputtering indignation get under the skins of reassembled Congressmen?

Just now they are grabbing their hats for a higher ride in the inflation balloon as steel leads in another wage and price hike. But they are protesting angrily. The price of meat . . . milk . . . butter . . . men's shirts . . . children's new fall garments (scheduled to be costlier), all these cause constant outraged cries. And again merchants are plagued by worries of consumer resistance and buyers' strikes. They would especially like to know how "mad" the consumer will be when the selling season for new fall clothes opens next month.

Some authorities on inflation insist that consumer resistance never amounts to more than talk—until enough family pocketbooks are dead flat. That is particularly true where food is concerned, they point out. In this field buyers' strikes, even when organized, seldom cause more than flurries of excitement and a lot of talk, they maintain. Some consumers, squeezed by inflation, or motivated by indignation or public conscience, may curtail their purchases. But others who have had juicy dividends or profits, or wage raises, or tax windfalls.

THESE NEW rich are now counted on to help keep prices soaring for a few more months, perhaps longer. They are the last remnant of the old sucker market of wartime. They spend freely and don't ask too many questions. So long as their money lasts goods will move.

But does this mean that the rest of consumers are helpless—or too futile—to do anything about the inflation situation?

There is evidence that consumer resistance even on an unorganized individual basis can affect industries whether or not it brings down prices. The amusement industry just now is acutely aware of buyers' strikes. So are the high priced resorts, liquor dealers, pastry manufacturers, others who deal in non-essentials.

The woman who turns her back when the butcher offers her steak at $1.25 a pound has influenced retailers to cut their buying of choice grades of beef and to go stronger on the cheaper cuts. Unless the new rich are great steak eaters its looks now as if $1.75 a pound steak will find few takers.

The clothing field is still vulnerable to consumer resistance. One retailer recently advised the public to complain vigorously about clothing prices whenever these seemed too high or the goods inferior. Thus he felt could the public attitude be gauged for the benefit of wholesalers.

THOSE WHO believe the unorganized but angry consumer can do something about prices cite the spontaneous buyers' strike of 1922 when the public got so "mad" that many of its members put on overalls and outlandish old clothing and stopped buying new garments. Prices soon dropped. But one doubts that today's inflation victims are quite that "mad or that broke."

The individual consumer today is still largely under the influence of wartime shopping attitudes. Frequently he still accepts goods and services on the resigned basis of being glad to get anything or of making the most of a situation that can't be helped. Then he does his griping to family and friends.

Many shoppers are watching their pennies and driving close bargains. But many others are still careless, like the new rich. Many do not use their power of opinion and of free speech in regulating their economy.

However, as prices move on up, consumers with nonelastic incomes are likely to find their rage mounting. There is a chance they will "break out" in some spectacular indignation as in 1922. There is also a chance they will make Congress definitely aware of how they feel—if not now in Washington, then at the polls in November.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Prices And The President

WASHINGTON is a city of angry men. The Republicans are furious to a man. Southern blood is boiling. And President Harry S. Truman, the cause of it all, is angry, too. His special message to Congress was a good deal less shrill than his acceptance speech in Philadelphia. But the mood of that speech persists.

Truman's advisers asked him casually last week when he intended to send his message to Congress. Truman replied irritably that he did not intend to send it at all—he was going to take it himself, and the Republicans could boo till they were blue in the face. The President is, in fact, spoiling for a fight, and what he mostly wants to fight about is prices.

He made that quite clear at last week's Cabinet meeting, when he laid down the law with unaccustomed fire. The special session program had, in fact, already been worked out in broad outline before the Cabinet met. Most of the preparatory work on the price control measures, which are the heart of the message, was done by Paul Porter, former OPA administrator, with the advice of Presidential Counsel Clark Clifford and Economic Adviser Leon Keyserling among others.

SOME CONSIDERATION was given by these men to a much more drastic program than that the President has now presented to Congress. This involved the absolute freezing of all prices and wages at present levels, on the simple theory, as one presidential adviser put it, that "this thing has got to stop." This idea was soon discarded as unrealistic, especially since it was believed that it might give the impression that the Administration was preparing for war. Pressure from labor leaders to eliminate all reference to wage controls was also resisted, largely on Porter's advice. What finally emerged was something very like the Administration price program which received such short shrift from the Congress last autumn.

At that time the Administration's presentation of Truman's price proposals was almost ludicrously ineffective. A number of Cabinet officers and other Administration officials, conspicuously including former Agriculture Secretary Clinton Anderson and Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, made it perfectly obvious before various congressional committees that they were wildly unenthusiastic about the whole program. When he outlined the new price program to his Cabinet, Truman evidently had the painful memory of these episodes in mind. He firmly told the Cabinet members that if any of them did not like the program, now was the time to say so, and not later.

No murmurs of dissent were heard. Accordingly, the Administration can be expected to present the special-session program to the Congress and the electorate with a good deal more force and discipline than was the case nine months ago. Porter will be the generalissimo of the whole operation. Chief witness for the Administration proposals will be Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, and Secretary of the Interior Julius Krug.

NINE MONTHS ago Treasury Secretary Snyder hotly opposed the increase in bank reserves which are an essential part of the present program. But if he returns from his West Coast vacation, he will be firmly ordered to toe the Administration line. Edwin Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, fears that the council may appear a mere propaganda organ of the White House. Despite these hesitations, the members of the council, and conspicuously Vice Chairman Keyserling, will probably be tapped as Administration witnesses.

In short, the Administration strategy is to appeal to the electorate over the head of Congress, by hammering hard on the price issue as long as the session lasts. But although the Republican leadership has taken no final decisions as this is written, the Administration may never have the opportunity to put this strategy into effect.

At a Monday caucus of Republican leaders, the House contingent expressed sentiment for an immediate adjournment. It was argued that this move could be justified on several grounds—that the calling of the special session was a purely political maneuver, that the proposed measures could only be administered by an efficient executive; that a prolonged squabble would disastrously undermine American prestige before the world. Most of the Senators disagreed. As one of them said: "Something just has got to be done about prices." However obviously politically motivated the Administration proposals, and however angry all concerned may be, it is hard to disagree with that remark.

Grand Jury Probe of U. S. Reds May Backfire, Cronin Fears

The Federal grand jury investigation in New York which led to indictment of 12 top Communist officials may backfire, and give the Communist Party in America a "clean bill of health."

Fr. Cronin

This was the fear expressed yesterday by the Rev. John F. Cronin, assistant director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference's department of social action, in an address here before the Exchange Club. Two years ago, Father Cronin touched off a congressional investigation when he charged Communists had infiltrated high Federal jobs and were relaying information to Russia.

In his speech yesterday, the Catholic official said that from what he had been able to gather, the Department of Justice had changed the course of its grand jury investigation after it found the case it was preparing, showing Communist espionage activities in the United States, could not be proved in court.

Father Cronlin said the investigation had been begun when a disgruntled Russian spy (the famed "blonde spy" in the case) gave the Justice Department a "fantastic" story of espionage activities here. He said that the "fantastic" story later was proved to be entirely true, but that evidence to support it, such as wire tapping, etc., was not admissible in court.

It was at this point, said Father Cronin, that the course of the grand jury investigation was changed, resulting in indictments under Alien Registration Act of 1940. The charge is that the 12 men advocated overthrow of the Government.

"For the Justice Department to prove that the Communist Party tried to overcome the Government by force and violence would be quite difficult," said Cronin. "It must constitute 'clear and present danger'."

"A great mistake was made initially and is being continued," said Cronin, in saying that the Communist Party is advocating the overthrow of the Government of the United States . . . I do not think the Communist Party has plans to overthrow our Government in the near future."

"The real danger of the Communist Party in the United States," he said, "is as an agent of a hostile foreign power engaged in a cold war against us." Cronin said the party has been "remarkably successful in boring into high Government positions, and using those positions to siphon information to the Soviet Union." At the same time, he said, Communists have used their positions to help form policy of the United States Government.

Revelation of this situation, said Cronin, "would be a salutary thing for the American people."

"Even if the Justice Department did not convict the indicted people, they would be able to prove the American Communist Party is a breeding ground for treason and espionage, as the Canadian Communist Party has been proved to be," Cronin said.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Republican Strategy In Congress

THE STRATEGY of Republican leaders in the special session of Congress called by President Truman is now fairly clear. They are confident that the end result will be to show the Democratic Party hopelessly divided and bankrupt in the face of the Republican challenge.

Childs

Certainly they will work both in public and behind the scenes toward that objective. They feel that they will have invaluable assistance from their chief ally—the rebellious Southern Democrats. In fact, without the Southerners the GOP might be in for an embarrassing time.

Civil-rights legislation is expected to precipitate a Southern filibuster. This can be choked off by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. But, according to present intentions, that will not be done until the Senate and the country are sick to death of the flood of Southern oratory.

This may mean three of four weeks. In any event, at least the first week or 10 days will be lost in the preliminaries of organization. When patience has been worn down, the Republican majority, with the aid of some Northern Democrats, will vote cloture and pass one of the less radical civil-rights measures.

THIS WOULD take the session into September. Republican leaders would then declare that Democratic obstructionists had made it plain that any hope for constructive legislation from the "rump session" was futile and, therefore, nothing remained but to adjourn.

Many Southern Democrats are as bitterly opposed to price control and public housing as are the right-wingers in the Republican Party. They can be counted on to sound off as noisily and as wildly as any Taber on the Republican side of the aisle.

President Truman can, of course, disavow responsibility for those Southerners who have seceded from the party. (The rebelling Southerners insist that the North is in seceession and that they represent the true party.) The public, however, does not make such fine distinctions. In the public mind, the Rankins of the South are still Democrats.

There would be nothing to prevent President Truman from calling Congress back into session again if they adjourned without acting on the measures he is requesting. But this the President will not do. He will let them go home with another blast at the "worst Congress" in history.

What effect all this will have on the campaign is anyone's guess. The Republicans are not too worried. Their confidence of victory in the fall is too great to be shaken by the warfare that has already begun under the Capitol dome.

THE ROLE of the Republican candidate, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, has been defined by his campaign manager, Herbert Brownell. In the brief statement issued when he took over campaign headquarters in Washington, Brownell spoke of the "rump session" called for political purposes.

Under Brownell's guidance, Dewey will hold himself strictly aloof from the contest between the Democratic President and the Republican Congress. It will be his attitude that the struggle is merely a carry-over from the past and of no significance for the future.

Timing is, in a sense, on Dewey's side. In the summer doldrums most people do not take a very lively interest in politics. They are concerned with vacations and getting away from the ordinary routine.

While the President and the Congress quarrel, Brownell will go ahead with Dewey's campaign plans. In the present tentative stage the Dewey campaign calls for at least three trips out into the country, including one grand tour to California and return, which will probably come first on the schedule.

Dewey himself puts great stress on carrying Missouri, the President's home State. If he has his way, and he usually does, he will crisscross the State, making two or three important speeches there, including one on bossism in the citadel of the once-powerful Pendergast machine.

Beneath his friendly, unassuming appearance, Brownell is an astute politician. A long-time associate of the New York Governor, he managed the 1944 campaign and learned a lot of lessons from that grueling experience. The Brownells—he is a member of a large law firm in New York—have taken a lease on a handsome Virginia estate near Washington, complete with swimming pool.

They are considered here to be the advance guard of the new dispensation. The session of Congress may shake that confidence and undermine the hope of victory, but Republican leaders do not believe that it will.

House Group Plans to Open Hearing on Dr. Condon Soon

By The Associated Press

Representative McDowell (R., Pa.) said yesterday the House Committee on Un-American Activities plans to hold hearings soon on its charge that Dr. Edward U. Condon "is one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

Condon, director of the Government's National Bureau of Standards, has denied the charge and demanded public hearings to answer them. McDowell said these will be held as soon as Chairman Thomas (R., N. J.) is permitted by his physician to return to Washington.

"All we need is the doctor's permission for Mr. Thomas to come back," McDowell told reporters whom he summoned to his office to make the announcement.

McDowell expressed the opinion the committee labeling of Condon in its preliminary report last spring is "almost a perfect description." Since then, the Atomic Energy Commission has investigated Condon and cleared him to examine atomic bomb information.

The committee's closed-door sessions, said McDowell, have produced testimony to support the original charge—which included a statement that the Government scientist had associated "knowingly or unknowingly" with a suspected Russian spy.

"There has been no charge that Dr. Condon is disloyal," McDowell said, "and I don't think there will be. However, he has associated with known Communists and other persons we believe are espionage agents."

Condon recently was cleared by the Atomic Energy Commission to examine atomic bomb information after a lengthy investigation. He had agreed voluntarily to steer clear of atomic data until such an investigation had been conducted.

McDowell said the commission did not ask the Un-American Activities Committee for any information before clearing Condon, and added:

"They perhaps don't know what we know, or if they do and still cleared him they should be investigated themselves. We asked the commission for the sources of their information, but of course they refused to give them to us."

President Truman ordered all Government agencies at the time of the committee's original blast against Condon not to turn over any confidential files to Congress. The House group had asked W. Averell Harriman, then Secretary of Commerce, for a Loyalty Board report on Condon. Harriman refused.

Business Outlook

New Method of Steel Pricing Not To Relocate Plants Soon

By J. A. Livingston

Philadelphia, July 27.—I see by some of the papers and magazines, said grandpappy, that we're on the threshold of an industrial revolution in the United States. And Benjamin Fairless, president of United States Steel Corp., and the attorneys who advised him are responsible.

Livingston

I see that pretty soon auto factories, refrigerator plants, foundries and all kinds of fabricating plants will be picking up equipment, know-how, and key personnel and moving near the steel mills—the better to get steel cheaply. I also read, continued grandpa, that the steel mills will pick up their blast furnaces, know-how, and other assets and move to auto factories, refrigerator plants, foundries and fabricating plants, the better to get business.

Grandpa's eyes sparkled. Wanna make a bet? This industrial gadding back and forth won't take place for a long time yet. Steel mills and steel fabricators, like men, are creatures of habit and environment. The steel mills have their labor and sources of supply for coal, iron ore, limestone and scrap. They have established transportation routes to and from their plants by rail, water and truck. Sure, a company may decide to put up a plant near a major consuming center—like New York or Philadelphia. But that's not revolutionary. That has happened before. That's why Great Lakes Steel is just outside the Detroit area.

Such decisions take time, study, deliberation and, when you're putting up an integrated steel plant, millions of dollars. Continental Steel Corp., of Kokomo, Ind., is a comparatively big business. But as steel companies go, it's small. It controls only about four tenths of 1 per cent of the Nation's steel-making capacity. Yet its buildings and equipment are carried on its books at five million dollars net. It probably would cost a lot more to reproduce them at current prices. And in addition the company has $6,500,000 of inventories and other working capital.

Steel consumers also have their on-site labor and sources of raw materials and channels of trade. In many cases, they are near their major markets. So they're not going to uproot and rebuild near steel mills just because steel prices at the moment are being quoted f. o. b. mill. Grandpa's voice rose. It takes more than a change in the method of pricing steel to upheave this country economically.

Grandpa waved a book—"Industrial Price Policies and Economic Progress," by Edwin G. Nourse and Horace Drury. Nourse, grandpa pointed out, has since become chairman of President Truman's council of economic advisers. Listen to this. And grandpa paraphrased: When Pittsburgh was the center of steel and the Lehigh Valley was the home of cement concerns whose fortunes were tied up in these places wanted to retard the transfer of business to new regions.

Thus United States Steel developed the Pittsburgh plus freight method of pricing. Cement companies used Lehigh Valley plus freight. Result: There was no advantage in a steel or cement user moving close to a steel or cement mill and no advantage in a steel or cement mill moving close to a major consumer. But, grandpa continued, as Nourse and Drury point out, that system broke down. Industry didn't stay put.

Eventually both steel and cement producers changed to multiple basing-point systems. Bethlehem would set the price in its territory, Republic in its, and U. S. Steel in its. They'd cross one another's lines. But they did it by a conventionalized system of pricing.

Grandpa shook his head. Theoretically, Fairless has changed that. Each mill will set its own price at each plant and add freight to it. There'll be many, many prices everywhere. Actually, that's the case today anyway. Buyers seem to want steel at any price and from any distance. Fairless simply recognized conditions. But before the war, areas like Pittsburgh, Cleveland, or Sparrows Point, Md., produced more steel than they consumed. Sellers of steel had to go outside their own bailiwick for business.

What most people don't realize, grandpa continued, is that you can't invade a competitor's market without meeting his price. If prices are different and the product is the same, there is no competition. The lower-priced producer gets the business. The higher-priced producer quits. When big buyers and big sellers compete, prices must be equalized. The basing point system was a way of equalization. Now, some similar system of price equalization—of competition—will probably evolve.

Grandpa looked up: Will Buick at Flint be willing to pay more for steel than Chrysler or Ford at Detroit? Or vice versa?

Patent Law Amendments Asked by FTC

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday proposed amending patent laws to prevent "undue control" through international cartels.

In a report to Congress, the commission cited what it called operations of the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing companies.

"These two companies, particularly General Electric Co., through its foreign subsidiaries, took the initiative in forming and attempting to form international cartels to include British, German, and other companies," the report said, adding:

"The extent to which General Electric and Westinghouse owe their present positions to keeping others from using foreign patents and experience is most difficult to measure.

Source of Direct Income

"It is certain, however, that they have made their patent exchange contracts a source of direct income in the form of royalties."

Also, the commission said, the two companies have protected their own positions in the American market by limiting the use of American rights under foreign patents . . . to themselves and other American companies acting as their licensees. Naturally, under such circumstances, licenses will be withheld from competitors.

"But if the competitor attempts to manufacture without license, he can be stopped by patent infringement proceedings even though the patent infringement may not be in actual use at all in the country."

A condition attached to the control of patents in many foreign countries, the FTC said, is that they shall be "worked" within specified periods.

This situation, the commission added, "suggests that Congress may well give legislative consideration to the desirability of so amending American patent laws as to make impossible undue control, not only of patents originating in America, but also of American rights acquired under foreign patents."

At Schenectady, N. Y., a spokesman for General Electric said the conclusions of the Federal Trade Commission are "inaccurate and misleading."

A General Electric statement said:

"One outstanding result of such agreements with foreign companies is that this country through General Electric has had access to a wealth of scientific and technical inventions and information and at the same time has been able to contribute immensely to development of the electrical industry in the world generally. During the war, the company made these inventions freely available to the United States Government and the allied countries in the promotion of the war effort.

Aided Proximity Fuse

"For example, inventions received over these contracts contributed to the development of the proximity fuse which was so important to the Allied successes in World War II . . ."

The spokesman pointed out that General Electric international agreements are involved in pending suits brought by the Department of Justice but that no decisions have been given as yet in these cases.

At Pittsburgh, Westinghouse commented the "FTC report is based either upon lack of understanding or lack of knowledge of the Westinghouse licensing practices and policies. . . . To the best of its knowledge, Westinghouse has never refused to grant a license under a U. S. patent licensed to it by a foreign concern, and has taken active steps to grant licenses under such patents."

Veteran Detectives Guest, Scott to Be Retired August 1

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Retirement of two veteran detectives, Lieut. Dewey L. Guest and Sergt. Samuel Scott, is expected to be announced by the Commissioners effective August 1.

Both have been ill for several months, Guest suffering from a nervous disorder and Scott from a heart condition. Their retirement will make way for six promotions in the bureau.

Guest, 50, has been in the department 25 years and has been in plain clothes 15 years. During this time he served in almost every squad in the bureau and is retiring as head of the check and fraud squad.

In 1937 he participated in a running gun battle with three holdup men who had been terrorizing liquor store operators. After their capture the men confessed to over 20 noldups.

Sergeant Scott, 48, has served with the department 23 years, and has been in the detective bureau 17 years. For 11 of these he served in the subversive squad and is probably the first policeman to work on Communist activities.

In 1930 Scott attended a Communist meeting in Uniontown, Pa., as a member and rode back to Washington with them.

He has a reputation in the department of being able to pick out Communists at their meetings by name. In the last six years Scott has been assigned to the homicide squad and is its only Negro detective.

U. N. Economists To Study Haiti, Make Proposals

Lake Success, July 27 (NYHT).—The first economic mission ever sent by the United Nations to an individual member state will go to Haiti this fall to survey the Haitian economy and recommend measures for its improvement, the Haitian delegation to the U. N. announced today.

At the request of the Haitian government, nine experts, selected from the U. N. Economic Affairs Division and several of the U. N. specialized agencies, will make a first-hand examination of Haiti's agriculture, industry, fiscal policy and social and educational programs.

The experts will draft recommendations for the Haitian government, which can seek further U. N. aid in obtaining loans and other assistance it may need in carrying out an improvement program.

Construction Sets Half-Year Record

New York, July 27 (AP).—Contracts for construction of all types in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains in the first six months of 1948 totaled $4,766,795,000, the F. W. Dodge Corp. reported today.

The total was a new record for any first half period and compared with $3,937,736, the previous high total which was awarded in the first half of 1946, the reporting service said.

The volume of contracts in the first six months was 36 per cent greater than in the first half of 1947.

The greatest gains were in nonresidential building, up 60 per cent over the period a year ago. Residential awards climbed 24 per cent higher, and heavy engineering work gained 26 per cent over the awards for the first half of 1947, the Dodge Corp. reported.

Maryland Banks Report Decrease in Deposits

Baltimore, July 27 (AP).—Loans increased, but deposits and total assets decreased in Maryland banks during the first six months of the year, Deputy Bank Commissioner John D. Hospelhorn announced today.

Total resources on June 30 were $913,207,416, a drop of $24,094,019 from the end of 1947. The slump from June 30, 1947, was only slightly less than three million dollars.

Other changes in the last six months: Deposits, $25,266,000 decrease; investments, $21,868,000 decrease; cash on hand and in banks, $13,380,000 decrease; loans and discounts, $10,909,000 increase.

Hospelhorn said investments fell off primarily in United States obligations. The shrinkage in deposits occurred mostly in demand deposits of commercial institutions. His report covered 104 State banks and trust companies.

The offering will constitute the largest single revenue bond offering in the history of American finance. The issue consists of 47 million dollars in serial bonds and 87 million dollars in term securities.

The issue will be distributed by a Nation-wide syndicate handled jointly by Drexel & Co., B. J. Van Ingen & Co., Blyth & Co., and First Boston Corp.

The Agriculture Department's announcement stated that a total of $58,800,000 has been allocated to all States and territories. Congress appropriated 75 million dollars for the program, which is five million more than last year.

Finn Reds Refuse To Join Cabinet

Helsinki, July 27 (AP).—Finland's Communist-led Popular Democratic Party refused tonight to participate in the new government proposed by Karl-August Fagerholm.

The Popular Democrats have not officially stated their conditions for joining a coalition government. Reliable sources said, however, the Communist group wants five important cabinet posts instead of the four less conspicuous ones offered by Fagerholm.

Political circles believe Fagerholm, Social Democratic speaker of parliament, can form a cabinet without the Popular Democrats and still have a majority in parliament.

Swede Hopes to Lead Hypnotized Orchestra

Stockholm, July 27, (U.P.).—Dr. Gunnar Nordgren, Swedish psychiatrist, today was planning a trip to the United States in hopes of finding an American symphony orchestra he could direct while all the musicians were hypnotized.

Nordgren, director of an institute of hypnosis in Stockholm, said "there is a definite connection between hypnosis and music," in that both aim at carrying subjects into "tridimensional space."

C. & O. Equipment Issue

Minor Planet Discovered in Orbit of Earth

Mount Hamilton, Calif., July 27 (U.P.).—A new minor planet, traveling unusually close to the earth, has been reported by astronomers at the University of California's Lick Observatory here.

The new discovery, the sixth minor planet ever discovered within the orbit of the earth, was found by C. A. Wirtanen, senior observing assistant, while studying a photograph of a new comet discovered by him on July 17.

The minor planet is moving directly northward more than 1 degree daily. Its brightness is about the thirteenth magnitude, which means that it can be photographed with a small astronomical camera.

Scissors Menace Olivier 'Hamlet'

By Richard L. Coe

GLOBE-CRAWLING: Six days a week the Boston city censors have their say, but on the seventh it's up to the Massachusetts State Police . . . Which means the Commonwealth's censors are getting tough with Sir Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet." . . . The actor's long awaited film of the Shakespearean tragedy is to open at Boston's Astor Theater Wednesday night, August 18, but at the moment it's touch and go whether certain of the Bard's lines will be deemed fit for a city whose mayor once ruled the Athens of America from a jail . . . Universal-International, which is releasing the film in this country, has been told by the State's censor, Bernard H. McLaughlin, that he is "repelled" by certain of the old play's lines . . . Universal's reply seems to this corner more signigcant even than the arrogant McLaughlin . . . The firm appears to have stated that the lines to which he objected might not "even be included in the final editing." . . . Since the film already has been edited for its current London showing, could it be that U-I will be doing further "editing" on its own? . . . Obviously one must be something of a traveler to check up on how alike various prints of films are, but trotting off to London to check on U-I seems excessive . . . To the credit of the Legion of Decency, that organization has not entered the Boston controversy . . . It already has classified the Olivier "Hamlet" as "A-II," which means "morally unobjectionable for adults."

BRIGHTON, England's seaside resort, cheered Helen Hayes in her opening tryout performance of "The Glass Menagerie" . . . Yes, it's stil the Tennessee Williams drama in which Miss Hayes will make her London bow this week at the Haymarket . . . Through one of those curious flukes, several journals reported that the Hayes debut was in "Happy Birthday," her last Gotham vehicle, but that was probably because Miss Hayes' own report of the event was in a letter to Anita Loos, brainmere of that comedy . . . On tap at the Haymarket are Charles MacArthur and Mary . . . Directing Miss Hayes is John Gielgud, who also will be doing "Medea" with Eileen Herlie for the Edinburgh Festival next month.

LONDON recently saw the West End bow of a one-man show at the St. Martins, where Ruth Draper is a perennial favorite . . . This offering of Actor John V. Trevor is "One-Man Shakespeare" . . . Trevor has edited such plays as "The Merchant of Venice," "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Macbeth" down to little over an hour's playing time each . . . He plays all the roles, changing characters with the twist of a wrist, the lining of a cloak becoming someone else's outer garment . . . As curtain raisers for these he offers several sketches of his own and a chilling version of "Rope," which he played in the New York company and which is about to appear on our screens as directed by Alfred Hitchcock . . . Trevor started his "One-Man Shakespeare" during the war to entertain troops, adding it to his original assignments for ENSA, the British USO . . . There's talk of an American trip for this performer, once Maurice Evans' manager . . . He should do as well on the college circuit as he did at the Middle East Army bases.

BELGRADE recently saw "The Seventh Veil," which played at Keith's all of two years ago . . . From a friend in Yugoslavia we've received a review from Belgrade's Literary News, which may give you some idea of the "official" reaction to a picture which was very popular in the western world: "The human relations are quite unnatural and the human figure is distorted. Everything is mystified in this film and not one element is realistic, living and true in the scenery or in its interpretation. It is all typical of the decadence of bourgeois art . . . The hypnotizing doctor is very similar to any commercial traveler or small employe of the company which produced this film . . . The technical possibilities of the film and the efforts of the producer tried to hide the emptiness and the ideological monstrosity of the film. The music also serves as a bait for the public, to present the lies and all the abnormalities of a subject which is a picture of the decadence and artistic fall of bourgeois culture."

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S campus is playing host to Basil Langton, English actor, director and producer (Stratford, Old Vic, Birmingham Rep.), who is to direct the drama group's final play of the summer, "Heartbreak House." . . . This will be the first Bernard Shaw play the Capital has seen in some moons, and what's a season with its Shaw? . . . Captain Shotover's adventure opens a week's run Sunday night in the campus theater . . . Tickets at Michigan 6000, extension 358.

Montgomery Heads Named Defendants in Charter Suit

The Montgomery County Commissioners will become voluntary defendants in the controversial lawsuit over the proposed charter form of government.

The development, first since the County Circuit Court ruled a clause of the proposed charter unconstitutional, is a necessary preliminary to a final court decree on the issue.

President Brooke Johns, of the commissioners, said yesterday the board had agreed to the court-initiated move because it had been told the judges wished to issue certain instructions to the county government in the final decree. At present, the court has no jurisdiction over the commissioners in the matter.

May Re-advertise Charter

He interpreted the action to mean that the board, charged with the responsibility of advertising the charter, might be instructed to re-advertise the document with the unconstitutional clause deleted before the scheduled November election.

The charter suit, filed by Hubert A. Schneider, Bethesda attorney, seeks an injunction against a referendum on the political issue on the ground that the charter document is unconstitutional. Schneider was upheld on the legality issue by the court, which ruled last week that a charter stipulation providing for adoption of the annual budget in June is contrary to State law. The proposed charter council must adopt a budget in May, the month set aside for all legislative functions, the court opinion declared.

Objects to County Police

Also at their regular meeting in Rockville yesterday the commissioners received a letter from Mayor John C. Post of Takoma Park, requesting that the dual town and county police force be discontinued.

Post asked that the four county policemen, three desk clerks and one cruiser be withdrawn. He asked the county to turn over to the town three fourths of the police tax money collected in the town so a wholly independent town police force can be created.

In his letter, Post cited "low morale" of town policemen, forced to work with the higher paid county policemen.

The proposal was referred to County Attorney F. Barnard Weish for recommendations, but board members expressed doubt the request could be granted without special legislation.

Matterhorn Victims Found

Zermatt, Switzerland, July 27 (AP). Alpine guides found today the bodies of three Oxford undergraduates who fell 3000 feet while trying to scale Matterhorn Sunday.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

10 Health Sleuths Hunt VD Victims

By John London
Post Reporter

Along the broad avenues, the narrow streets and the twisting alleys, ten health detectives prowl, for unsuspecting victims of venereal disease.

The sleuths are trained field workers for the VD bureau of the District Health Department.

Their mission: to track down men, women and youths who have had sexual contact with individuals under treatment for VD.

An assignment to one investigator starts with one or a few names of contacts listed by a patient. By clever detective work, the field worker may uncover a chain of venereal infection reaching across the city.

For example, checking the playmates of one youth treated for gonorrhea, an investigator discovered some 30 youngsters, aged 4½ to 14—some of them were infected by playing a precocious game called "mom and pop."

Then there was the homosexual syphilis victim. He listed 28 friends. Eventually, investigators located 48 men involved in one VD chain reaction.

Investigations today are concentrated on contact chains of syphilis, because of investigation staff and financial limitations. Gonorrhea cases have simply become too numerous to check.

However, gonorrhea patients at District VD clinics are urged to persuade those with whom they have had sexual relations during the infectious period, about two weeks prior to appearance of symptoms, to apply at clinics for treatment. At least 30 per cent of such contacts show up, records indicate.

But in syphilis cases, nurses at clinics elicit from patient names of person with whom the victim had contact during the infectious period, ranging from three months to a year prior to onset of the disease.

At the office of Dr. A. Truxton Morgan, Health Department epidemiologist and chief of "health detectives," the names are checked against files of past chains and patients recently treated, to amplify information and eliminate unnecessary work.

Occasionally, the investigator succeeds only in serving as the target for a threatened knife attack or a pail of water. Usually, about 65 per cent of contacts interviewed agree.

But often it takes as many as a dozen phone calls or personal visits to get the contact to carry out his agreement and actually go to the clinic.

If a contact is strongly suspected of being infected—and gets tough, as 65 did last year, Dr. Morgan resorts, reluctantly, to the District communicable disease law. He swears out an isolation order; police pick up the individual and deliver him into the custody of the Rapid Treatment Center at Gallinger. The individual is then entitled to a court hearing in 48 hours, but at this point, invariably, he's had enough and agrees to treatment.

Results of the contact dragnet? At least 1500 VD cases uncovered and treated in a year.

New Floriana Bishop

Pope Pius XII has named Rt. Rev. Msgr. Edward P. McManaman of Erie, Pa., as titular Bishop of Floriana and Auxiliary to Bishop John Mark Gannon of Erie, according to word received from Rome by the Apostolic Delegation here.

A native of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the 48-year-old bishop-elect studied at St. Thomas College, Scranton, Pa., and St. Bonaventure College, Allegany, N. Y., before going to Rome to complete courses at North American College.

At Garfield

Clinic Opens For Cancer Detection

A cancer detection clinic with staff and facilities to give 40 examinations a day was opened yesterday at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

Within a few weeks the hospital will add a clinic for diagnosis and treatment of tumors, Garfield Administrator Arkell B. Cook said.

The cancer detection clinic is open Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays and the tumor clinic will be open on Mondays and Thursdays.

Director of the cancer program, which is sponsored by the Garfield Ladies Aid and supported by the American Cancer Society, is Dr. Ralph M. Caulk, attending radiologist at the hospital.

Five examining rooms, a waiting room, consultation room and offices have been equipped by the Ladies' Aid at a cost of $3500.

"The center occupies quarters vacated last month by the Warwick Memorial Clinic which affiliated with George Washington University Hospital.

Mrs. Ashmead Fuller, treasurer of the clinic for the Ladies' Aid, said that eventually the group hopes to put the clinic on a paying basis. Each patient is asked to contribute $10, she said, but if unable to pay is given a free examination.

Wounded Man Better

Pvt. Eugene Butts, 22-year-old Fort Belvoir soldier, who was shot by an Alexandria policeman Saturday, was reported slightly improved yesterday in Alexandria Hospital. Butts was shot through the groin when he resisted arrest, attacked a policeman and tried to grab his revolver, officers said.

Miss Patton to Quit as Head Of Garfield Nursing School

Miss Shelby W. Patton, who entered Garfield Hospital as a student nurse in 1918, will retire Sunday as director of the school of nursing and nursing service.

Miss Patton

A year after her graduation in 1921 she was named head nurse and night supervisor, a position she held until 1927, when she became assistant director of nursing. She was appointed to the hospital's top nursing position in 1944.

She is a graduate in nursing education of Catholic University and a member of nursing organizations, including the American Nurses Association, the Graduate Nurses Association and League of Nursing Association.

The white-haired nurse, who has made her home at the hospital, will retire to Huntsville, Ala., where she lived before coming to Washington.

National Airlines Office Strike Ends

By The Associated Press

The six months' strike of office and clerical workers against the National Airlines was ended yesterday in a sudden agreement between the management and International Association of Machinists, effective August 2.

Several hundred members of the IAM were idled by the strike, which began January 23. Mechanics observed the picket lines thrown up by the clerical and office workers, adding to the number affected by the shutdown. The mechanics and clerical employes are enrolled in the IAM which was certified as bargaining agent in June, 1947.

Althoug National has an office here, no employes here are affected because the strike preceded beginning of operations here.

Sought Agreement

The strike was called to obtain a written agreement. The settlement, between G. T. Baker, president of the airline at Miami, and Harvey W. Brown, head of the IAM, provides for negotiation of a written contract within 30 days. Reemployment of IAM members by August 13 is guaranteed.

The pilots, members of the AFL Air Line Pilots Association, still are on strike. The air line, operating chiefly between New York and Miami, has been able to keep limited operations going despite the labor dispute.

The pilots have indicated that they will remain on strike and will expect the IAM members to abide by their picket lines. The pilots took the position that the company had refused to comply with grievance machinery.

Worker Felled, Pickets Jailed At Ohio Plant

Dayton, Ohio, July 27 (AP).—Dayton's police force went on an emergency schedule tonight, apparently for the duration of the strike at the Univis Lens Co.

Police Chief R. F. Wurstner said his policemen had been placed on two 12-hour shifts. This action followed by several hours an outbreak of violence along a CIO United Electrical Workers picket line when Univis employes, answering a back-to-work call by the company, tried to enter the plant this morning.

Policemen pierced the 200-person picket line with a flying wedge. They formed a corridor through which nonstrikers returned to work. One such employe was struck down by a picket, who managed to dodge past the police detail.

ICC Backs Rise In AB&W Fare

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday recommended fare increases for riders of the AB&W Transit Co.

The fare increases do not affect commuters to the area of the Pentagon, the Washington National Airport, or the Air Force Annex and Navy Annex in Arlington, but only the area beyond this. The ICC recommendations will go into effect on August 16 and will be final if instrastate increases asked by the AB&W are granted.

The present 10-cent zone of the AB&W will be increased to two tokens for 25 cents or 15 cents cash. All other zone cash fares remain as they are with tokens eliminated for these zones.

Meanwhile, a three-judge tribunal was appointed to hear a contest over the 13.3-cent joint fare set by the Interstate Commerce Commission for rides from any point in Washington to Government installations in Virginia.

The jurists on the panel are Justices Wilbur K. Miller of the United States Court of Appeals and Alexander Holtzoff and Edward A. Tamm of the District Court here. No date has been set for the hearing.

The panel will hear the suit brought by the Capital Transit Co. which insists it is entitled to 10 cents a ride or a $1.50 weekly pass from all its passengers. If its contention is upheld, the total fare will be 20 cents for a ride from Washington points to the Government buildings on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Six Arrested In Holdup at Md. Garage

Prince Georges County police yesterday charged six Maryland men with assault and robbery in the hold-up Monday of a Capitol Heights garage. Police traced them through the license number of the car they used and arrested them early yesterday.

The men were arrested by Montgomery County police and turned over to Prince Georges authorities. Five of them are being held in Marlboro Jail because of failure to make $1000 bond each. A sixth, Merrill Hyson Thornton, 24, of Wheaton, whose car was used in the raid, police say, is free on bond.

The others are Charles Wilson, 19, Winston Chunn, 18, Mose Boyd, 23, all of Linden; William Carter, 21, and Lawrence Hyson, 22, both of Wheaton.

Shortly after 1:30 p. m. Monday, police say, the men entered the Perry Garage, 7115 Central ave., Capitol Heights, Md., armed with a shotgun, knife and rock. The rock is alleged to have been used to hit Armor Macon, 35, of 7500 Central ave., attendant. Macon dropped to the floor and the men fled with $5 from the cash register.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 30 in Upper Marlboro Police Court.

Pillow Is Wielded To Rout Intruder Armed With Knife

A Takoma Park (Md.) man, armed with a pillow, yesterday routed from the bedroom of his home a knife-wielding intruder he caught rifling his trousers.

George Besenyei, 8402 Greenwood ave., told police he awoke about 3:30 a. m. to find a Negro, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, robbing his trousers in the first-floor apartment bedroom.

Grabbing a pillow, he approached the man threateningly, he said, but was warned to stay back "or I'll cut you." Besenyei said he struck the man with the pillow, and in the resulting scuffle he was cut on the shoulder.

The man then fled through the window he had entered. Besenyei chased the man into the street, but lost sight of him, he said.

Seerey's Homer in 9th Beats Nats, 2-1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THEY'RE ONLY A sixth-place ball club, but the Nats have been the best show in town this summer even as Clark Griffith suggested last spring in Florida that Washington would like his "scrappy little team." Evidence that the citizens have cottoned to 'em is available in the attendance figures showing larger crowds than last season.

POVICH

They've lost 11 more games than they've won, but they haven't lost easily or with especial good grace which is another thing the customers like. They've been a pain in the neck to the first division clubs, particularly the league-leading Red Sox whom they've licked five times in nine starts. They're in sixth place, but never regarded as a push-over on any given day. Griffith is very fond of what he calls "my little ball club:"

He classes them with his two particular prides, his 1924 and 1933 teams, which is some kind of attribute because those other clubs won pennants and here the 1948 Nats are laboring to get out of the second division. "They've got that same kind of fire," says Griffith. "They don't have the good ball players, but they make it interesting anyway."

JOE KUHEL'S a cinch to have his managerial contract renewed. Griffith easily absolves Kuhel from the sixth-place stigma and credits him with doing a tremendous job "with a ball club that has been getting poor pitching and doesn't hit much, and lacks that one big player who could be the difference between sixth and second place." Kuhel has 'em running and taking chances and pulling the unexpected, Griffith points out.

"The wonderful thing is that we're not in seventh place or last the way our pitching has cracked up on us," said Griffith. "That's the thing I thought we had going for us in Florida—a good pitching staff. But the pitching has let us down, and we're still not too far out of the first division. We've been getting a good job from Kuhel and our kids like Al Kozar and Eddie Yost, and we're a threat to win any game we play."

Except for the pitching, Griffith likes his ball team better than he did in Florida. "I was only hoping, then, that Kozar would be a good ball player. Now I know he is. Our catching is the best in the league. Christman solved our shortstop problem and has been a big help. We're not getting much hitting from our outfield, but with better pitching our club would look all right to me."

The club's records point an accusing finger at the Nats' pitching. Early Wynn, Sid Hudson and Mickey Haefner have won only 15 games in 52 starts. That is a bitter pill for Griffith who was exuding high optimism about his pitching in the spring. "I was more proud of my pitching than anything else," he says, "but it didn't work out that way. If we didn't have a fighting ball club, we wouldn't be as good as sixth."

Before sending his Nats into their current Western trip two days ago, Griffith called Sid Hudson into his office for a consultation about Hudson's 3-and-9 record. The white-browed owner of the Nats is a devout believer in the heart-to-heart talk with his athletes. At various stages of the season he has hauled in Gil Coan and Mickey Vernon for these talks and watched them return to their jobs with new enthusiasm.

"Hudson needed some encouragement and advice," said Griffith. "It pained me to see him putting good stuff on the ball and still getting licked. He was down. I told him to keep putting that stuff on the ball and he'd start winning. He was getting beat because he was using bad timing in grooving 'em.

"HE WAS BEHIND the hitters and when he had to get the ball in there, they banged it. His control isn't that bad. He has enough stuff and control to keep ahead of the hitters. I told him to get his first pitch in there and there'd be no call for him to groove a 2-and-2 pitch for fear of walking somebody.

"I've had Hudson in my office before. Back in 1940, when he was just up from the Florida State League he lost the first seven games he started for us. I called him in and he asked where I was going to send him. I told him 'nowhere' and then I told him he was a good pitcher and I was doubling his salary. I did, too, and he won his next eight games in a row and was a fine pitcher for us."

Hudson agreed to junk his side-arm delivery and revert to overhand pitching, his originally successful service. "He ought to win for us the rest of the season," said Griffith. "And Mickey Vernon's new hitting streak is no surprise for me. I called him in the other day and showed him a new and shorter bat I ordered for him without his knowledge. I told him I'd fine him any day he didn't use it. He's raised his average 20 points and we're both happy."

Joe Tinker, 68, Dies on His Birthday

TINKER AS PLAYER

Orlando, Fla., July 27 (U.P.).—Joe Tinker, the bandy-legged little shortstop who was the starting cog in baseball's immortal Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance double play machine, died today on his sixty-eighth birthday.

His death wiped out the famed trio which sparked the Chicago Cubs to four National League pennants just after the turn of the century. Frank Chance, the first baseman, died in 1924, and Johnny Evers, the second baseman, died March 28, 1947, at Albany, N. Y.

Although Tinker had been suffering from a respiratory ailment and diabetes for a long time, his death came suddenly. He entered Orange Memorial Hospital here 10 days ago, and only this morning the hospital reported him in his "best" condition since his admission.

But at 11 a. m. he collapsed without warning, and 15 minutes later he was pronounced dead.

In 1944, Tinker had waged a desperate battle for his life, and he won it after many days under an oxygen tent. A year ago, however, one of his legs was amputated to prevent the spread of an infection.

Celebrated as one of baseball's greatest shortstops, the round little man was in the real estate busi-

Bosox Win 13th in Row, Rout Tigers

Detroit, July 27 (AP).—The rampaging Boston Red Sox ran their winning streak to 13 straight games tonight by blanking the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 0, on Ellis Kinder's three-hit pitching. Hal Newhouser gave up the first three Boston runs before departing in the third inning with a sore arm.

Newhouser, the first of five Detroit pitchers to parade before the league leaders, was charged with his seventh defeat as Boston stretched its first place margin to a full game over Cleveland.

The throng of 54,809 fans, biggest in seven games this season under the Briggs Stadium lights, had visions of a nohitter as Kinder breezed through 5 1/3 innings before Johnny Lipon lined a double to right center for the first Detroit hit.

Vic Wertz also doubled in the seventh and Lipon singled in the eighth but only one Tiger runner got as far as third off the little Red Sox righthander.

Newhouser retired the first five men he faced, but before the second inning was over Boston bunched four hits with a pair of walks for three runs and coasted from there.

Boston raced to its top-heavy victory with only nine hits and without its No. 1 slugger, Ted Williams, who was out with a lame knee. Williams, who leads the American League in hitting with a .391 average, was struck by one of Steve Gromek's pitches last Sunday. Although he took batting practice tonight he remained out of the lineup.

Dodgers Fly Into 2d Place, Edging Cards 3-2 in Ninth

Brooklyn, July 27 (AP).—A misjudged fly by Terry Moore and Pee-e Reese's run-producing fly enabled the Brooklyn Dodgers to score ice in the ninth inning and nip the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2, today. The Dodgers were trailing, 2-1, going into the last frame. Gee ermanski singled to start the inning, the fifth hit off Howie Pollet. Hermanski moved to second on a sacrefice and romped home with the tying run when Moore misjudged Bruce Edward's drive, the blow falling for a double Pollet intentionally passed Tommy Brown. A wild pitch moved the runners up a base and after Gil Hodges was purposely walked to load the sacks, Reese sent a long fly to Moore, Edwards scoring after the catch with the winning run.

Junior Stars Play Tonight After Rainout

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Rain postponed last night's amateur all-star game at Griffith Stadium between Washington and Brooklyn.

However, the boys go right back to the ball park tonight to play their return engagement. The game will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Both clubs dressed for the game last night and were eager to play but a heavy downpour an hour before game time washed out proceedings.

Manager Owen Carroll, Brooklyn, and Jim Munro, Washington pilot, announced that there would be no changes in their line-ups. At Ebbets Field recently, Washington walloped the Brooklyn boys, 12-2.

The postponement probably was a break for the visiting pitcher, Billy (No-Hit) Loes. Just back from the Western swing with the New York Giants, Loes arrived at the ball park in time to have a ham sandwich and a glass of milk and then said he was ready to start.

Now the 18-year-old right-hander will have a chance to benefit from a night's sleep. All of which doesn't augur too well for Munro's boys, the pick of Washington's junior league. Loes pitched four no-hitters in hurling Bryant High to the Metropolitan New York championship. That trip with the Giants was a reward for being named the outstanding scholastic ball player in New York.

The Brooklyn team, sponsored by the Brooklyn Eagle and Brooklyn Dodgers, leaves here Thursday for the next leg on its grandiose road trip. From Washington the Brooklynites travel to Toronto, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Providence, R. I.

Munro said he still would name Bill Witzel to start for his All-Stars, sponsored by The Washington Post. Witzel, member of Munro's Marx team in the junior league, last year pitched it to the National championship when he beat New Orleans, 8-2.

A special 60-cent ticket will be sold boys and girls 15 years old and under for tonight's game. Adult admission, including tax, is $1.20. Tickets are on sale in the lobby of The Washington Post and at the ball park.

Heavy Title Sought For August 9 Winner

Recognition Asked For Charles, Bivins

Steps were taken yesterday to make the Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins fight here August 9 a world heavyweight championship affair.

Promoters of the fight at Griffith Stadium sent a telegram to Abe Greene, Paterson, N. J., president of the National Boxing Association, asking the NBA to formally recognize the Charles-Bivins winner the champion.

Joe Louis announced after his knockout of Jersey Joe Walcott that he will not fight again. Louis, however, has not put his retirement down in writing.

Bout Will Go 15 Rounds

Yesterday's action by local promoters was taken after a conference attended by Mrs. Florence Turner, promoter; Gabe Menendez, matchmaker, and representatives of the Variety Club, sponsor of the fight for a welfare fund.

In requesting "full recognition" of the Charles-Bivins winner as the champion, Menendez said that he has the approval of both fighters and their managers.

They have agreed to lengthen the fight to 15 rounds, customary championship distance, if the NBA puts its title stamp on the bout.

'It Stands to Reason'

Charles' manager is Jake Mintz, Cincinnati, and Bivins' pilot is Leonard Shane, Cleveland.

"It stands to reason that the winner of the Charles-Bivins fight should be recognized as Louis' successor to the title," Menendez said.

"With Gus Lesnevich's loss of the light heavyweight title to Freddie Mills in England, Charles quite definitely is the No. 1 contender for Louis' title. And Bivins, with a great record, is just behind Charles in the ratings."

Lesnevich's Defeat Starts Free-for-All

New York, July 27 (AP).—The shopworn heavyweight crop jockeyed for position today in the free-for-all race for Joe Louis' title following Freddie Mills' upset victory over Gus Lesnevich.

In one day the entire situation has changed. Where Lesnevich once was the key to the situation, now there was only wild confusion on all sides.

Sol Strauss, acting promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, once inwardly sure he would be able to lure Louis from retirement for a September date with Lesnevich, was left with empty hands. He had no Louis. Now he had no Lesnevich.

Telephone calls to various spots on the globe were Strauss' first moves toward setting up an elimination tournament, consisting of two 10-rounders at the Yankee Stadium, September 22. To date nobody had been signed.

Ezzard Charles, ranking light heavyweight contender from Cincinnati, figured in Strauss' plans. Jake Mintz, Charles' manager, was summoned to a conference later in the week. It is likely he will be offered a date with Lee Savold or Jersey Joe Walcott. A Walcott-Joe Baksi pairing might be the other 10.

Strauss has hopes of luring Mills to America for an overnight scrap, probably with Savold or Baksi who holds a knockout win over the new light heavyweight king.

Babe Culnan, American representative of Ted Broadribb who manages Mills, echoes the challenge from England, "We want Louis." Culnan will advise Broadribb to skip any elimination tournament and wait for Louis, if he should decide to come back. Louis repeatedly insists he never will change his mind about his retirement.

Bantam Paterson Bows to Belgian

Birmingham, England, July 27 (AP).—Jan Machtelink, Belgian featherweightt champion, knocked out Jackie Paterson, British bantamweight titleholder, in the fourth round of an overweight 10-round bout tonight.

Paterson weighed 126 pounds, Machteling 128.

Cockiness Knocked Out Of U.S. Squad

By Gayle Talbot

London, July 27 (AP).—Uncle Sam's Olympic athletes dug into their training today with renewed intensity. None was permitted to forget that American sports prestige suffered a severe jolt when Gus Lesnevich got his lumps last night from Freddie Mills.

The lesson taught by the lightly rated Briton might have come at a very handy time—three days before the games begin. The American athletes have not been known for their lack of confidence since their arrival in England.

Driven hard by their coaches, they all put in strenuous practice sessions today in mid-summer heat.

Swiss Our First Foe

Meanwhile, in a downtown office the basketball draw was made with the favored United States aggregation paired with Switzerland in the first round. Action for the 23 teams starts Friday morning and 94 games will have been played before a champion is decided on August 13.

Mal Whitfield, America's best bet at both 400 and 800 meters, practically concluded his training with several sprints at shorter distances. He runs in the 800 on the opening day of competition.

He reeled off 220 yards in 21.6 seconds, and then did successive quarter-miles in :50 and :52.6.

Cliff Bourland of Los Angeles led a fast 200-meter trial in which runners of sereval nations took part. He finished two yards ahead of Herb McKenley of Jamaica, in 20.8 seconds.

Zatopek Lacks "Style"

The Americans got their first look at Emil Zatopek, the noted Czech distance star, as he trotted around the Uxbridge track, and they frankly were disappointed at his lack of "style."

The Czech is favored to win both the 5000 and 10,000 meters in the games, yet the Americans wondered out loud how he ever posted times for which he is credited at the two distances.

After watching Mel Patton take practice spins, Coach Dean Cromwell appeared to be satisfied that the Olympic track will do its part toward cracking a few records.

The American women all felt much better at having scored a decisive moral victory over the Olympic housing committee. They demanded—and got—softer beds at their Southlands Training College camp.

Italian Communist Writer Is Barred

London, July 27 (AP).—Political mysteries—the exclusion of an Italian Communist newspaperman and the unexplained absence of two athletic teams from Russian satellite countries—raised unwelcome complications for Olympic officials today.

Tomasso Giglio, correspondent for the Italian Communist paper Unita, was barred from entry into England. By his own story, printed under screaming headlines in his own paper, Britons met him at Dover, quizzed him several hours and sent him back the way he came by boat across the Channel.

Meantime, the beds reserved in the West Drayton Olympic camp for 14 Bulgarians and 25 Romanians remained unslept in. Olympics officials said their absence is a "complete mystery."

Olympic Swim Suits 'Shocking'

London, July 27 (AP).—America's Olympic women swimmers are shocked at the scanty costumes worn by European swimmers. And they mean the men as well as the women.

"Why they hardly cover anything," gasped Nancy Merki Lees, 400 meter freestyler from Asheville, N. C. "The men's suits are even worse than the women's."

"They're making me self-conscious," said Mary Patricia Healy of Newark, N. J., of the relay squad.

Maryland Vets Say Horse Blind In One Eye Only

Cumberland, Md., July 27 (AP).—Joseph F. Flanagan, Maryland Racing Commission steward at the race track here, said tonight he would recommend to the commission that a better agreement be set up between Maryland and other States regarding the reporting of barred horses.

He made that statement in announcing that the local investigation of the death of Jockey Benny Leggett after as spill Saturday had ended.

The investigation showed, he said, that Alpine Boy, a 12-ear-old horse which bolted and spilled Leggett had been barred from racing in West Virginia.

Flanagan said the aged horse is blind in his right eye, but that his left eye is all right.

He made public this statement, signed by Drs. S. M. Keller and John A. Stewart, track veterinarians:

"This is to certify that the horse Aipine Boy, stabled at Cumberland, Md., was examined on Saturday, July 24, prior to the fourth race, and found fit to race."

"On July 27, the above-named horses was reexamined, and no apparent physical change was noted."

Midget Car Death Suggests Banning Of Family Men

Avon, Conn., July 27 (AP).—Banning of fathers of large families from the midget auto racing tracks of Connecticut was being urged today following the death of Race Driver William H. (Bill) Kilpatrick, of East Hampton.

Kilpatrick, 31, and the father of six children ranging in ages from 3 to 13, died at St. Francis Hospital, Hartford, early yesterday from injuries he received Sunday night in an accident at the Cherry Park Speedway here. It was the second death of a speedway driver in Connecticut this season, but several others have been killed in past years.

The racing drivers held a meeting Sunday night following the meet here and brought forward two proposals. One was the banning of fathers of large families from the tracks.

Chaining Case Bans Trainer At Arlington

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—Richard L. Hanna, Philadelphia, Pa., a trainer of thoroughbred running horses, today was suspended for life by the Illinois Racing Board. The board said he inhumanely beat two thoroughbreds with a chain on the training track at Arlington Park during the early morning workout period July 20.

The beaten thoroughbreds were Teardrop and Skyway, owned by O. L. Nyeberg, a Baltimore, Md., sportsman.

The beatings were revealed by a veterinarian for the racing board when he discovered skin abrasions and welts on the animals.

Hanna did not attend the hearing.

Hanna's license as a trainer in Illinois was revoked and he was further denied the privileges of all five race tracks in the State.

Captain Boudour King Rosa,

Reh, Gladding Tie With Record 69s

Women Have Playoff for Golf Trophy

Ann Reh of Washington Country Club and Lois Gladding of the host club each posted a record-breaking low net score of 69 yesterday at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club to cause a playoff for the Class A Championship of the Women's District Golf Association and the Times-Herald cup.

The twin 69's, lowest net totals ever recorded in the association, will cause a special playoff Thursday.

Defending Champion Mrs. A. B. Lower, playing without a handicap, had to be content with low gross honors for her sparkling 78, the only sub-80 card in the field of 86.

Miss Reh toured the par 75 course in 41-44—85, Miss Gladding in 40-40—80. Miss Reh had a handicap of 17, Miss Gladding's 11.

Mrs. J. W. Kinder of Prince Georges was runnerup to the winner with an 88, 16—72. Other prize-winners in the order named were Mrs. C. B. Hartman of Indian Spring, 89, 15—74; Mrs. Charles Egenroad of Washington, 95, 11—74; Mrs. Michael Mehan of Belle Haven, 85, 13—75; Mrs. F. J. Hunter of Kenwood, 91, 16—75; Ruth Simon of Woodmont, 89, 13—76, and Mrs. Charles Frownfelter, Prince Georges, 86, 10—76.

Joe Tinker Dies at 68

...ss here at his death. He had ...rved as a sort of unofficial talent ...out in the South for the Boston ...raves, but his active baseball ...ys actually ended in 1923 when ... quit as manager of the Orlando ...am in the Florida State League.

Tinker played with the Cubs ...om 1902 until 1912.

Tinker was never a great hitter, ...though, with a sawed-off bat, he ...d take great delight in his unique ...ility to collect countless base ...ts off Christy Mathewson.

Starting Man of Trio

His specialty, however, was ...ooping up those ground balls and ...iving them a fast whip to Evers ... start a double play.

Tinker was born at Muskoda, Kans., July 27, 1880, and started playing professional baseball with Coffeyville, Kans., at the age of 19. He next went to Denver in the Western League, Great Falls-Helena in the Montana State League and Portland, Oreg., in the Pacific Northwestern League.

In 1902 he went to the Cubs and stayed there until 1912. Chance left the team in 1911 and Evers in 1912.

Tinker was manager of the Cincinnati Reds in 1913 and of the Chicago Whales in the ill-fated Federal League in 1914-15. From 1917 to 1920 he was president and manager of Columbus in the American Association, and from 1921 to 1923, manager at Orlando.

$7500 Top Salary

Tinker never received more than $7500 for a season, and continually was amazed at the high salaries of modern stars.

The double-play combination which was to become so famous was formed on the Cubs late in the 1902 season, more by hit-or-miss than by design. Tinker went up to the club as a third baseman, Evers as a shortstop and Chance as a catcher.

Manager Frank Selee wanted to use all three in his lineup, but he already had a good catcher so he arbitrarily made Tinker the shortstop, Evers the second baseman and Chance the first baseman.

For 11 years the trio formed baseball's greatest double-play combination. The National League Service Bureau points out there are no official records sufficient to tell just how many double plays the trio effected; however, it was the ability to come up with them at the right time—rather than with the greatest number—that made Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance a baseball by-word.

Miss Veley Wins Golf

Miss K. F. Veley won the handicap play for women at Manor Club yesterday with a score of 95, 21—74. In the putting contest, Mrs. A. J. Loda was low with 31, Mrs. J. R. Kettier second with 33 and Mrs. B. Abin, Congressional, third with 36.

Coach Hunt On

Uline Sponsors Hockey Lions Again Despite Loss of Riley

Uline Arena will have its own American League hockey team this winter although right now it's looking for a successor to Coach Jack Riley.

Riley recently was signed to coach the Tulsa Oilers of the United States Hockey League, a farm of the Boston Bruins. Riley's move raised a question as to whether Uline might be planning to drop hockey.

"We'll definitely have a team," Manager Paul Rothgeb said yesterday. "I'll admit that I was surprised when Riley decided to leave us. He told me he just decided a change would be beneficial for him."

Rothgeb said several men are under consideration for the coaching post. They include Bill Cowley, chief scout for the Lions last year and a top National League scorer when he played for the Boston Bruins; Frankie Beisler, who led Buffalo and then Baltimore to hockey crowns in their respective leagues, and Lou Trudell, one-time Washington player called by Rothgeb "one of the most popular we ever had."

M. J. Uline's hockey venture hasn't been the most successful of his many enterprises.

Last season Uline made what he termed "a big mistake" when he agreed to operate the Lions as a farm for Leonard A. Peto, Canadian sportman who's been trying to put a National League team in Philadelphia.

Uline sued Peto for $53,000 for salaries and expenses. Later, Peto filed a countersuit for more than $200,000. Both legal actions still are pending.

Bogley Enters Fourth Round

South Bend, Ind., July 27 (AP).—Gil Bogley, representing Washington, D. C., in the Western Junior and Boys tennis tournament at the University of Notre Dame, advanced through three rounds of play on a bye, a narrow victory late Monday night and an easy win yesterday.

Yesterday Bogley brushed past Keith Self, La Mesa, Calif., 6—3, 6—2.

Defending junior Champion Tony Trabert of Cincinnati won his third round match with Dick Holroyd, Miami, Fla., 6—3, 6—1.

Unseeded Don Thompson of Jackson Heights, N. Y., whipped seventh-seeded William Quillian of Seattle, Wash., 6—2, 6—4, in the only upset of the three rounds.

Defending boys champion Robert Perry of Los Angeles easily won his third round match from David Sofield of River Forest, Ill., 6—0, 6—1.

Hutchison, first-half champion, moved within a game of clinching the second-half title of the Boys Club of Washington Junior League, Western Division, when it crushed Edmond's, 16-3, yesterday on the Ellipse in a game called after 4½ innings because of rain. The victory was Hutchison's nineteenth in twenty-two starts.

Plight of Worker Trying to Retain Grade and Salary

(Second of Two Articles)

The next question was, "At what salary?" Naturally, career employes wanted to retain salaries to which they had risen during the war. Having been on the rolls for years, they had the best opportunity to gravitate to top jobs. But, when a grade 12 employe lost out in Agency A, it was often difficult to find a similar position for him.

When a person rises to grade 12 it is only human that he immediately acquires a grade 12 standard of living. This may include a new automobile, a new house, or bigger family. When the storm hits, he is desperately anxious to maintain the same standard of living, the same salary, and the same grade, but Agency B has no such position available; it is willing to offer him a grade 5 salary job at a heavy cut. This he does not want and other openings Agency B does not have.

In such a dilemma many personnel directors maintain that the best interests of the Government would be served by putting career employes and war-service employes into a common pot and selecting the best. Particularly, they are aggrieved when they are compelled to appoint such career employes without war-service employes even having a chance to compete in an examination. An outsider might agree that everyone concerned is right. Obviously, all of them cannot get what they want.

However, here are the figures: Nearly 11,000 displaced career employes have been placed in the period beginning April, 1947, through June 7, 1948. Many of those who have not been placed are those who have not been willing to accept a lower salary.

Another tremendously large group concerned in the conversion problem consists of veterans. They have the advantage of preference rights and have streamed into the Government in huge numbers. Of about two million employes, at present, veterans now number more than 800,000. Most of them are veterans of World War II. Of all male employes, 55 per cent are veterans compared with 13 per cent in July, 1944. In its placement of veterans, the Government has done a good job.

Agencies that used to have some apprehension about hiring them on the ground that if unsatisfactory they would be hard to release now take their presence for granted. The veterans themselves know that they get an important break, both in appointments and in reductions of force, and ordinarily feel that they have been treated with consideration.

One remaining group which has had its problems are the women employes. During the war, this total went over a million. When the war ended, their numbers dropped to a surprising degree. Some of them married returning soldiers and went home and raised families. Others who had accepted positions in response to repeated appeals to help win the war were extremely glad to quit work and get back to their other circles. Others were sir ply war-service employes who were replaced in very large numbers by returning veterans.

Today, less than 1 in 4 in the entire Government are women. The latest figure is 402,416 in the United States. Relatively few of them have veteran preference. This sometimes puts them at a disadvantage.

Most of the above groups have the viewpoint of the average employe. There is another group which has its own special problems—the personnel directors of the agencies. They are held responsible for recruiting competent employes. They feel, in many cases, they would be better off if they could retain more war-service employes already on the roll whose services are satisfactory. Sometimes this is possible; sometimes not.

When the war-service employes were hired, they were told they would have to pass competitive examinations in competition with veterans and this program is being followed. But the personnel director is constantly approached by the section head who has a perfectly wonderful employe. The boss cannot possibly get along without her services. Unfortunately, she is unable to pass a competitive examination. There are hundreds of such individuals.

Another real problem of the personnel director is the necessity of trying to lure eligibles onto the roll at salaries not even remotely equalling those paid by private industry. In getting the postwar staff down to normal, a certain establishment not long ago had to fire a large number of employes in a reduction of force. Thereafter, additional workers were authorized, and letters were sent to the men who had been let out asking them to return to duty. In practically every case, the answer was "No." The reason given was that in private industry the pay was higher and why come back and work for the Government which had just laid them off?

It is hard for some to understand why in a reduction-of-force period an agency always needs additional employes — stenographers, for example. This inability to recruit stenographers has been a continuing headache. The Veterans Administration alone received, during the last fiscal year, more than 139,000,000 letters, which amounts to about one from every man, woman and child in the United States, and their correspondence problem is only one drop in a very large bucket.

Higher Fees Urged for D. C. Public Lodging

Group Advocates Closer Control by City Heads; Hearing Scheduled Sept. 7

By James E. Ficken
Post Reporter

Higher public housing license fees and a reorganization to strengthen District control over such accommodations were proposed to the Commissioner yesterday by their special public housing committee.

The city heads ordered a hearing September 7 to obtain the public's reaction to the proposals.

The plan would affect all hotels, apartment, lodging, rooming and boarding houses, convalescent or nursing homes, and other public housing in the District.

At the same time, the Commissioners extended the deadline for filing license applications to operate such establishments from August 15 to October 1, so that any new fees or regulations can be applied to next year's licenses.

Call Some "Tenements"

These changes in housing categories were proposed by the committee:

1. Set up a "tenement house" classification to cover accommodations which cannot be considered apartments (because they include no private kitchen or bath facilities) or "rooms" (because the tenant, rather than the owner, does the housekeeping).

Health officials said the new classification would enable them to make inspections and withhold licenses where accommodations were unsatisfactory.

2. Change the definition of "apartment houses" to include one-room apartments and make it necessary for them to conform to regulations.

3. Limit the designation of "hotel" to include anly establishments having "rooms for transients and a dining room and kitchen on the premises." This would prevent so-called "flop houses" from billing themselves as hotels, committee members said.

4. Set up a new classification for convalescent or nursing homes, so they will no longer be designated and licensed as "rooming houses."

During the last fiscal year, the committee said, these services cost $497,688, while income from license fees amounted to only $187,441. The new license fee schedule would provide enough additional revenue to cover the entire cost, it added.

Fee Rises Proposed

These fee increases were proposed (not to exceed a maximum of $500 a year for a single establishment):

Apartment houses—for five apartments or less in a single building, $5 each a year; for more than five apartments, $25 a year for the first five and $3 for each additional. (Present rate: straight fee of $15, regardless of number of apartments or number of buildings in one "apartment house" group.)

Tenement houses—for five tenements or less, $5 each a year; for more than five tenements, $25 for first five and $3 for each additional. (No license required at present.)

Rooming houses—for not more than five roomers, $15 a year; for more than five roomers, $15 for first five and $1 for each additional. (Present fee: $15 a year.)

Lodging houses—same rate as for rooming houses.

Boarding houses—annual fee would go up from $15 to $25.

Hotels—for 10 rooms or less and one kitchen, $50 a year; more than 10 rooms and one kitchen, $50 for first 10 rooms and one kitchen, $25 for each additional kitchen and $2 for each additional room. (Present rate: $18 per year, regardless of number of rooms).

Convalescent or nursing homes—for each home with facilities for five convalescents or less, $40 a year; for more than five convalescents, $40 for first five, plus $1 for each additional. (Present rate: $15 per year, as "rooming houses.")

Overholser to Go To London Meet

The Congress is scheduled to meet from August 11 to August 21.

At its end, Dr. Overholser said, he planned to tour European countries and study their mental health programs. He estimated the study tour would take several months.

13-Month-Old Boy Suffocates In Pail of Hog Swill on Porch

A 13-month-old toddler suffocated yesterday when he tumbled head first into a pail of hog swill at his parents' farmhouse on Largo road, 1½ miles north of Marlboro, Md.

The child, Ambrose Howard Lewis, might have been saved, his grandmother said, if motorists had stopped to help her. She said she signaled "many" passing cars in front of the home for nearly an hour before one stopped to take her to Marlboro with the unconscious boy.

Marlboro Fire Department rescue workers applied resuscitation measures for three-quarters of an hour before Dr. James G. Sasscer pronounced the boy dead. Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death due to asphyxiation by suffocation.

Mrs. Ada Sweeney, the child's grandmother, said he was left in her care while his mother, Mrs. Bessie Binger Lewis, was at work in the tobacco fields. She said he wandered out on the back porch, where he fell into the pail used to hold garbage and other kitchen leavings. The moist mass is daily thrown to the hogs as food.

The dead boy was the only child of Ambrose and Mrs. Lewis, but a step-brother and step-sister, children of their mother's previous marriage, survive. They are Richard Binger, 4, and Bessie May Binger, 3.

Funeral services will be held at the farmhouse on Thursday. Burial will be in the cemetery of Trinity Episcopal Church, Upper Marlboro, Md.

Court Orders Mental Test For James in Knife Slaying

A mental test for Eugene H. James, Baltimore janitor indicted for the knife slaying of Marsha Brill and Carol Bardwell, was formally ordered yesterday by the Baltimore Supreme bench.

Judge Joseph Sherbow instructed Dr. Manfred Guttmacher, medical adviser to the Supreme bench, to conduct the psychiatric examination.

James has pleaded insanity in answer to charges of killing 11-year-old Marsha Brill in Baltimore on July 6 and of raping and robbing a Baltimore housewife. He has also been indicted by a District grand jury for the murder of Carol Bardwell, also 11, in Rock Creek Park on June 27.

Trial on the Baltimore charges is scheduled for September 20.

Meanwhile, in the contempt of court citations against five Baltimore radio stations and a newscaster, which grew out of the James case, National Association of Broadcasters President Justin Miller reiterated NAB's intent to fight the contempt charges to the limit.

Addressing broadcasters at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Miller said he would confer today with representatives of the Baltimore radio stations involved, and also with Elisha Hanson, general counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Hanson has joined the NAB in opposing the citations, declaring them to be "absolutely in conflict" with constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press.

The radio stations have been given until October 1 to answer the contempt citations, which were issued under a Baltimore court rule prohibiting, among other things, publication of news of any statements a prisoner makes after his arrest. James is reported to have confessed slaying both the Brill and Bardwell girls.

Silver Spring Court Fines, Jails D. C. Man on Gaming Charge

A District gambler, who admitted in court yesterday to a monthly "take" of between "500 and $700" was fined $1000 and sentenced to six months in jail.

The defendant, charged with possession of both numbers and horse racing slips, was Lawrence T. Harvey, 55, of 1410 Holly st. nw. The penalty was imposed in Silver Spring Police Court by Judge Wheeler.

When testifying, Harvey was asked by his lawyer, Barnard T. Welsh, of Rockville, if he were in "gambling business." Harvey freely admitted he was. He said he had stopped after completing a 5-months' jail term in District Jail in 1938, but resumed "about 2 years ago."

"When you get to be my age, it's not easy to get a job," he told Judge Wheeluer.

When questioned by his attorney, Harvey testified he maintained headquarters in Prince Georges County and conducted his business exclusively in that county and the District.

Under cross-examination, however, he admitted accepting some bets in Montgomery County.

Harvey immediately noted an appeal and was released under $2000 bond.

Boy, 3, Burned Touching Wire On Fence

A three-year-old Takoma Park, told Prince Georges County poterday morning when, his mother lice, he touched a "hot wire" on top of a nearby fence.

The lad, Ray McDonald, was rushed to Washington Sanitarium, where a physician treated him.

His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald, 38, of 6326 Eastern ave., Takoma Park, said that a charged wire was placed on the waist-high fence by someone who "just don't like children."

Police were unable to find any electrical connection when they returned after taking the boy to the sanitarium. They said they did notice a seared place on part of the fence which might have been in contact with an electric charge.

Mrs. McDonald, whose husband, George, 47, is a truck driver, is the mother of eight children, including Ray.

The McDonalds have lived at the Eastern ave. address almost three years.

3 Children Hurt; Boy, 3, Falls 15 Feet

Three children were injured yesterday in separate accidents, one of them, a 3-year-old boy who fell 15 feet from a second-story bedroom window at his home.

Barry Thomas Tyler of 214 E st. sw., youngest of four children of Mrs. Bertha Tyler, a Navy Yard cafeteria waitress, was taken to Gallinger Hospital last night where he was admitted in "undetermined" condition with a possible skull fracture.

Left in the care of his sister, Pearline Tyler, 13, Barry was supposed to be sleeping when the accident occurred about 1 p. m.

Linda Greene, 17 months old, whose home is at 6400 Dorsey rd., Forestville, Md., was reported by police to have cut her lower lip and bruised her jaw when she fell down the front steps of her home. Removed to Providence Hospital by the District Heights (Md.) Rescue Squad, the girl was treated and released.

Francis R. Short, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Short of 419 W st. ne., received a cut in the forehead when he was hit with a rock thrown by a playmate. Francis and his 9-year-old friend were in the vicinity of the woods on Edgewood Playground, 3d and Evarts sts. ne., when the accident occurred.

Francis, whose father is a cable splicer with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, was treated at Sibley Hospital and released.

Four Injured On D. C. Streets

Four persons were injured in three District traffic accidents yesterday police reported.

James L. Simms, 2½ years old, of 5648 Blaine st. ne., was in undetermined condition at Gallinger Hospital after he was hit by a car as he was crossing 57th st. ne. Police said the car did not stop immediately, but the driver, a 17-year-old boy, returned to the scene of the accident with his father and drove the young victim to the hospital.

In a two-car collision at 8th and East Capitol sts. Mrs. Mazie Cayer, 39, Glen Burnie, Md., was thrown from the car in which she was a passenger. She was in undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital where she was admitted following treatment for a possible head injury.

Another traffic accident involving a streetcar and an automobile resulted in undetermined injuries to John S. Labay, 34, of Smithfield, Ohio. Police said Labay was thrown from his car by the impact of the collision at 2d and S sts. nw. and went under the tram.

Labay's wife Jeannette, was also admitted to Casualty. The 27-year-old woman was reported not in serious condition.

Tram Operator Held for Court In Center-Door Death of Boy

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

A coroner's jury yesterday held a streetcar operator responsible for the death of a 19-year-old youth, who fell last Wednesday from the open center door of a streetcar while it was in motion.

The jury ordered Motorman Ralph Gurganious, 25, of 610 Quackenbos st. nw., bound over for the action of Municipal Court on a charge of negligent homicide.

The youth, Charles Franklin Wilson, of 1333 10th st. nw., died last Thursday at Freedmen's Hospital of a fractured skull received when he fell from the moving streetcar on Georgia ave., just beyond Madison st. nw.

Three boys who were with Wilson when he apparently forced open the center door, yesterday accused Gurganious of opening a green box near the motorman's seat and "tampering" with something inside just before the accident occurred.

Controls Safety Brakes

The green box was identified by police and a Capital Transit Co. equipment engineer as the container of a switch which controls automatic emergency safety brakes on the streetcar.

When the switch is turned on, as it normally is in streetcars, the emergency brakes will bring the moving vehicle to a stop within a half block after the center door has been opened, they said.

A taxicab driver, Jesse Wilkins, of 1109 Irving st. nw., stated that he was driving behind the streetcar for several blocks. He saw the center door open and close "about three times," then the boy fell out, he said.

Deny Switch Turned Off

Both Gurganious and his wife, Pauline, who was riding on the seat directly behind him, denied that he had turned off the switch controlling the emergency brakes.

Gurganious said the boys left by the center door when he stopped for a red light at Missouri ave. He was not aware that anyone had actually fallen out, he said, until a transit company inspector met him on his return trip from Takoma Park and told him about it.

Gurganious and his wife told the jury that the boys boarded the street car at 7th st. and Florida ave. nw. They were carrying some homemade band instruments and were playing them.

The boys cursed at the motorman when he told them to stop the noise or get off the car, the Gurganious couple declared.

Tried Center Door

The boys admitted playing the instruments, but said they stopped when the motorman came back and told them to. They tried to leave by the center door at Kennedy street, but he told them to come to the front, then started up the street car again before they could get off, the boys declared. It was at that time, that the motorman opened the box, they said.

The five boys, who were with Wilson and who took the stand yesterday, were William Workman, 14, of 1533 8th st. nw.; Jesse Ricks of 402 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Leroy Blalock of 806 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Phillip Gibbs of 1822 6th st. nw., and Robert Tyler.

Corning Urges Central High Absorb Powell Junior High

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Central High School will become a six-year high school if the Board of Education approves a recommendation of Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The school head explained this yesterday at a public hearing into his proposal to move Powell Junior High School into Central and the Bell Vocational School into the vacated Powell building.

The two units, Central Senior High School and Powell Junior High, would be operated as a single unit. The present education program in the District calls for students to attend six years of grammar school, three of junior high school and three of senior high school.

Dr. Corning said that the six-year high school plan has "many advantages" and cited "continuity" among them.

There will be a wider range of extra-curricular opportunities such as cadet training in the ninth grade open to the junior high students, Corning said.

Objection to the plan was raised by Arthur Kimberly, president of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association.

"The primary purpose in setting up junior high schools was to separate junior high students from high school students," he declared. Kimberly said his association also was opposed to having the Bell Vocational School with its large night school student body in the neighborhood.

Corning said that the Powell building, Hitt pl. and Lamont st. nw., and the old Johnson Elementary School, now an annex to Powell, will provide adequate facilities for expanding the vocational and apprenticeship programs carried on at Bell.

Corning's plan was indorsed by A. W. Lee, chairman of the apprenticeship committee of the Washington Building Congress, and Gino Simi, director of apprenticeship for the District.

Corning described the present Bell building, 7th and O sts. nw., as an "old, dilapidated building, which is not capable of renovation."

Arlington School Board Votes Hiring of Dr. Clair Christman

Evenly - opposed Arlington County school board members last night recessed a regular business meeting to convene at the home of their ill chairman—and break their tie vote.

The four members were split evenly on a proposal to hire Dr. Clair A. Christman, assistant health officer of the Montgomery County (Md). public health service, as director of Arlington County's school health department.

Board chairmas, Dr. Barnard Joy, suffering a throat ailment which raised his fever to 102 degrees, voted to hire Dr. Christman, while one former dissenting member refrained from voting.

Final vote on a motion to offer Dr. Christman a salary of $7500 and $300 additional for travel expenses was 3 to 1. Voting in favor of the measure were Dr. Joy, county agricultural agent; Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, school teacher and board vice chairman, and O. Glenn Stahl, assistant personnel officer for Federal Works Agency. Voting against was Colin C. McPherson, Arlington building contractor.

In the final vote at Dr. Joy's home, Curtis E. Tuthill, psychology professor, refrained from voting. Previously he had voted against the hiring.

Mrs. Campbell assured the board members she had Dr. Christman's word she'd accept the position at the salary voted even though she had requested $8000 in her application.

The post was made vacant by the resignation last month of Dr. Paul W. Bowden to accept a position with the Richmond Department of Public Health.

First proposal for the appointment of Dr. Christman brought a two to two vote. A substitute measure was presented setting the position pay scale at $6800, and the result on this measure produced a two to two vote. The meeting was recessed and opened again at Dr. Joy's home, 1718 N. Hartford st., three quarters of a mile from where it started, at the James Monroe School, 2300 Key blvd.

First motion voted on at Dr. Joy's was the one prescribing salary at the lower figure. The tally was three to two against the measure, with Dr. Joy voting in the negative. The original motion was then presented and passed.

Pastor Protests Jukeboxes' Noise At ABC Hearing

Noisy jukeboxes that supposedly interfere with church services were spotlighted by a minister yesterday in a protest against the transfer of a beer and wine license to a new owner at a restaurant at 1730 Kalorama rd. nw.

The Rev. Roosevelt McIntyre, pastor of Meridian Hill Baptist Church, 1725 Kalorama rd. nw., told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board he and his congregation objected to the sale of alcoholic beverages so near to the church.

He made the protest at an ABC hearing to consider the application of Robert Joseph, present holder of the beer and wine license, to transfer the license to David Perlmutter, ABC officials said.

ABC took the protest under advisement.

23 Business Heads Plan Corporation To Push Fringe Idea; Howat Chairman

Motorists will be given parking violation tickets if they leave their autos in metered parking spaces longer than one hour, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp warned yesterday.

The move against drivers who "hog" metered parking areas was announced as 25 business leaders agreed to form a corporation to push the development of "fringe parking" facilities.

Following a conference with Police Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller, Keneipp announced that police have been instructed to mark all autos parked in meter zones. Those who remain longer than an hour, regardless of the time indicated on the meter, will be charged with parking violation, he said.

Longtime Parker Hit

"The primary purpose of parking meters is to eliminate the longtime parker and thus give every one an equal parking break," he explained. "When a motorist parks for an hour and then deposits a second nickel for an additional hour of parking, the whole purpose of the meters is defeated."

Plans for the fringe parking corporation were completed by the businessmen during a luncheon meeting at Raleigh Hotel, sponsored by P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency.

Organization of the corporation, to be known as Merchants Parking Corporation, is expected in "about three days," according to C. T. McGavin, chief Highway Department economic analyst, who is assisting Howat.

It will be incorporated under the laws of Delaware, he said, and begin with $35,000 to lease lots and help provide fringe parking for 1350 autos.

The fringe parking program, developed by MVPA, would permit drivers to park at any of three fringe lots as long as they wish and obtain a shuttle bus ride downtown and back—all for 40 cents, Howat said.

Lots Made Available

Lots for 450 cars each have been tentatively arranged for in Temple Heights at Connecticut ave. and Columbia rd. nw., and areas near Heurich Brewery at 26th and E sts. nw., he said. Operators of Municipal Center Parking Lot, John Marshall pl. and C st. nw., also have agreed to make 450 spaces available.

Plans for the shuttle bus system to link the fringe lots with downtown shopping areas also were considered yesterday by the coordinating committee, a group which advises the Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission on traffic and transit problems.

General agreement on officers and directors for the Merchants Parking Corp. also was reached.

They are Maj. Gen. David McCoach, president; John Reilly, treasurer; Arthur J. Sundlun, secretary; Joseph C. McGarraghy, counsel. Directors will include Carter T. Barron, Dr. John G. Bell, Morris Cafritz, Frank Jelleff, Andrew Parker, George Quirk and Jennings A. Snider.

Gambler Fined $500 In Alexandria Court

Emanuel A. T. Harrison, 26, of 2315 1st., nw., was fined $500 yesterday in Alexandria Police Court for operating a numbers game and taking horse race bets.

Alexandria police arrested Harrison July 7 in a raid on a house at 1704 Fern st., Alexandria. Judge James R. Duncan fined him $300, and suspended a 90-day jail term pending good behavior for two years on the numbers charge. On the racing charge, Judge Duncan fined him $200 and gave a 60-day suspended sentence.

Rep. McDowell Gets Another Dollar Bill

Representative John McDowell's secret admirer came through again yesterday. He (or maybe it's a she) sent the Pennsylvania Republican a dollar bill— the twenty-sixth in the past year and a half.

The single-bill largesse arrived in an envelope without a return address and without any clue as to the sender.

The postmarks on the letters have been from a number of cities in Northern States. The envelope is usually addressed in block-type print.

"I haven't the slightest idea who my benefactor is, nor why I am being showered with the bills," Representative McDowell said yesterday.

"I've never asked for money in any of my speeches. And Bucks County is 'way on the other end of the State. If some one' pulling my leg, I guess I just don't see the point."

What does the Congressman do with the gift bills?

"I put them neatly in my wallet, and when I run into a fellow who looks like he needs a lift, I give him one of them," he explained.

And what's his reaction to the whole thing?

"Tain't suberversive so far as I know," commented the Congressman.

Turnips on Club Menu

Members of the National Press Club yesterday got a reminder of the coming election battle between President Truman of Missouri and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

The first item on the menu was: "Missouri turnips stuffed with New York beef."

Drunken Driver Fined

Charles Brown, 22, of 39 Myrtle st. ne., was fined $25 yesterday for driving a horse and wagon while drunk. According to Municipal Court charges, Brown drove his ice wagon into the back of an automobile near 2d st. and Constitution ave. nw. two weeks ago.

In court, Brown's only defense was, "Someone must have given the horse something."

Soldier Jailed for Theft

A soldier who stole the purse of a woman who befriended him was given a six-month jail sentence plus a $200 fine yesterday in Municipal Court. He is Pfc. Howard E. Wines, 26, of Fort Belvoir, Va. According to police, he met Mrs. Harriett Abbott, 55, of 509 E st. sw., June 28, and she bought him a steak dinner. While walking with Mrs. Abbott in the 700 block of H st. se., Wines struck her in the face with his fist and took her purse containing $60, police said. Mrs. Abbott spent two days in the hospital as the result of the beating she received.

2 Fined in Car Looting

Two youths were found guilty in Municipal Court yesterday of looting a station wagon of a set of false teeth, a mouth organ, a case of beer, a flashlight, an automobile radio and the title to the station wagon itself.

They were Lloyd Jackson, 19, of 714 3rd st. sw., fined $75 for larceny, and James M. Hickman, 19, of 316 Broad Alley, sw., fined $100. The theft took place July 23 from a station wagon belonging to Joseph T. Ward of 216 8th st. sw. All the property—except the beer—was recovered.

Where Polio Epidemic Has Hit Hardest

Whisky Theft Charged

A bartender at Ceres restaurant, 1309 E st. nw., was charged yesterday with stealing three bottles of choice whisky from his employer.

The barkeeper, John J. Kelly, 37, of 1328 Fairmont st., pleaded innocent in Municipal Court and was placed under $600 bond for jury trial September 16.

The Ceres management noticed, police said, that its liquor stocks had dwindled unaccountably by 300 bottles. John Lurba, son of the restaurant owner, investigated. He peeked through a small hole in the ceiling of the employes' dressing tle of liquor from his hip pocket. tle of liquir from his hip pocket. Subsequent investigation by police led to the charges.

Motorists Seek Roads to Avoid Carolina Polio

Southbound vacationers yesterday sought advice from District newspapers, motor clubs and offices of the United States Public Health Service on "best" routes to travel in polio-ridden North Carolina.

Even as they asked, infantile paralysis case reports from the State continued to rise, though North Carolina State Health Officer Dr. Roy Norton expressed belief the epidemic had reached its peak.

Thirty-three new cases were reported by the State Board of Health there yesterday, bringing to 960 the total number since January 1.

"Our previous experience has been," Dr. Norton said, "that there is a tendency for the cases to level off about this time of year. There is good reason to believe we have reached the peak."

In Virginia, three more cases were recorded yesterday, bringing the total to 69. Stricken were a 3-year-old girl of Fluvanna County; a 29-year-old woman from Troutville and an 18-year-old Salem boy. State health officers said there was no unusual concentration in any one area.

Motorists seeking advice on travel through North Carolina were informed by Public Health Service personnel of the number of reported polio cases in counties along their road routes. A map of the two States especially prepared by The Washington Post disclosed that United States Route 1 passes through counties least affected by the disease.

9.1 Pct. Rent Hike Recommended For Apartments

Rent increases averaging 9.1 per cent for 130 apartments at the Majestic, 3200 16th st. nw., were recommended yesterday by Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson.

Two-room-and-bath apartments would go up from $49.50 to $54 a month and four-room-and-bath units from $125 to $135, Tyson said.

In another case, William A. Richardson, rent control secretary-docket clerk, said American Investment Properties, Inc., has filed a petition asking rent boosts for 197 units at Chastleton Hotel, 1701 16th st. nw.

The increase requested would hike one-room-and-bath apartments from $32.50 to $37.38 a month, and four-room-kitchen-and-bath units from $85 to $97.75, Richardson said. No date has been set for public hearing of the request, he said.

CU Gets Grant For Specialized Nursing Study

Catholic University of America here has received grant of $35,832 from the Mental Hygiene Division, Public Health Service, to prepare students for specialization in mental hygiene technics and in psychiatric nursing.

The announcement was made yesterday by the Right Rev. Msgr. R. J. McCormick, rector of the university.

The grant, made to the university's school of nursing, provides for eight annual scholarships of $2000 each for qualified graduate nurses to pursue either specialty, McCormick said.

Scholarship applications, he said, should be received before September 1. Applications and further information may be obtained from the dean, School of Nursing Education, Catholic University of America, Washington 17, D. C.

Natural Gas Held Less Explosive

Natural gas now used in Greater Washington Area homes is "generally less explosive" than the manufactured gas employed until recently, a Bureau of Standards expert said yesterday.

The blast in an Arlington apartment Sunday which severely injured Miss Esther Williams has been blamed by county police on an explosion of the newer cooking gas.

Martin Shepherd, Bureau of Standards specialist in gas chemistry, said manufactured gas has hydrogen as a chief component.

Hydrogen, he pointed out, will explode when its mixture with air is between 4 and 75 per cent. Natural gas, with almost no hydrogen, has methane as a mjaor component with an explosive range of from 4½ to 15½ per cent.

At the same time, William K. MacMahon, manager of the Roslyn Gas Co., which supplies cooking gas to Miss Williams' apartment, said there had been no previous gas explosions since Arlington converted from manufactured to natural gas in 1946.

He said the blast in Miss Williams' apartment at 349 N. Glebe rd., Sunday, which shattered the wall to the adjoining apartment, might have been caused by a gasoline or cleaning fluid explosion.

Arlington police, however, said Miss Williams had told them this story:

On Sunday, she was cooking supper, had left a pot of food on a lit stove burner to answer the phone. She said she closed the apartment windows to keep out noises while she talked.

Finishing a half-hour phone conversation, she told police, she then returned to find the food had boiled over and extinguished the burner flames. When she attempted to light the oven, police said accumulated gases were touched off.

An employe of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, Miss Williams suffered third-degree burns of the upper and lower body before a neighbor led her to safety, her clothes afire.

Arlington Hospital last night reported her condition as still serious, with little change. They said she is being kept under oxygen.

Campbell Fined $50 for Rebuilding Coal Yard Trestle

Arthur F. Campbell, 53, Alexandria businessman and former chairman of the city Democratic committee, was fined $50 in Alexandria Police Court for violating the city zoning ordinance.

Judge James R. Duncan fined Campbell for rebuilding an old railroad—trestle in a residential zone and ordered him to stop work on the structure. Also fined $50 was the Washington & Old Dominion Railroad on whose right of way the trestle is situated near Randolps ave. Both defendants noted appeals to the Corporation Court.

Acquitted on a similar charge was Charles A. Shephardson, 33, of 2000 Russell rd., Campbell's son-in-law and associated with him in operating the Potomac Coal Co. Purpose of repairing the trestle was to allow coal cars to pull into the yard and unload.

Alexandria Zoning Methods Termed Illegal by Budwesky

Alexandria zoning procedures were called illegal last night by former City Manager Carl Budwesky, who said he thought every rezoning application granted since May 1 was void.

Budwesky, a lawyer, appeared at a City Council meeting last night in behalf of a citizen seeking rezoning of property. The attorney argued that the present procedure whereby the City Planning Commission conducts public hearings on rezoning is contrary to State law. Only the City Council, he said, can conduct such hearings.

A committee of the City Council has been investigating legality of the present practice, recently instituted, council members pointed out. No action was taken.

Also at the meeting, the Council authorized City Manager Nicholas Colasanto to "declare war" on starlings, which have been roosting in trees all over the city. Colasanto said he was considering several suggested methods of eliminating the bothersome birds.

City Bids Farewell To Mrs. Patterson

The house at 15 Dupont Circle, from which Mrs. Eleanor Patterson had seen Washington life and dictated the policies of the Washington Times-Herald, yesterday was the scene of the Capital's farewell to the 63-year-old woman, newspaper owner, editor and publisher.

Approximately 75 persons gathered there yesterday morning at 11 o'clock when private funeral services for Mrs. Patterson were held, in a flower-banked drawing room on the second floor of the mansion.

A small group of the curious started assembling outside the house hours earlier and stood silently while police directed cars bearing Mrs. Patterson's friends to the house for the funeral.

Work on the Dupont Circle underpass, which Mrs. Patterson had opposed, went on during the morning hours. The red dirt excavations just off the Patterson property had been masked by a screen of cedars, standing against a board fence.

Hour Not Made Public

The hour of the funeral was a closely guarded secret and some of those who stood outside the house were unaware when the rites began at 11 o'clock.

Inside the drawing room, where the family and friends, many of them of the Washington Times-Herald, sat the air was heavy with the scent of flowers. Mrs. Patterson's casket stood at the east end of the room, banked with yellow roses, before a large gilt-edged mirror.

At the west end of the room, on a small baleony, a harp sounded the notes which began the funeral rites and, 10 minutes later, indicated the end of the service.

The Episcopal service was read by the Rev. Dr. Dudley E. Stark of St. Chrystostom's Episcopal Church, Chicago. Among passages he included was the famous quotation from the fourteenth chapter of the Book of John:

"Jesus said, Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Two Portraits Look Down

Portraits of Mrs. Patterson in her youth and of the late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, her close friend, who died last April 26, looked down from the north wall on those who attended the simple rites.

Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Felicia Gizycka; her granddaughter, Mrs. Ellen Cameron Pearson Arnold; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary King Patterson, widow of Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, and three nieces, Mrs. Eleanor Baker, Mrs. Harry Guggenheim and Mrs. Josephine Albright, were present at the funeral.

Others, in addition to members of the Times-Herald staff, included Mrs. Pearl Mesta, Washington society woman, and Sir Wilmott Lewis of the London Times.

The family accompanied the body to Chicago last night where it will be buried today in the family plot at Graceland Cemetery.

Mrs. Patterson died suddenly Saturday of a heart attack suffered at her Prince Georges County, Md., country home, Dower House. She was reading "The Golden Violet" by Joseph Shearing, a mystery novel, when death came.

Our Correspondent, at Congress, Notes:

President's New Haircut, Sen. Lodge's Yellow Tie, The Ladies' Cool Frocks

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AFTER MONDAY'S brief argumentative opening President Truman's address to the joint session of Congress went off smoothly without pyrotechnical fanfare. The center aisle of the huge House chamber divided Democrats from Republicans with surgical precision. But even the politically innocent had no trouble figuring which was which. Figuratively sitting on their hands, Republicans remained tight lipped as wooden Indians while at appropriate Presidential pauses Democrats flippered hands with trained seal enthusiasm.

By noon every gallery seat was filled and late comers like Stanton Griffis, our newly appointed Ambassador to Egypt, had to stand squashed with dozens just inside the door. Outside the chairman of the Foreign Affairs' office, the State Department's protocol chief, Stanley Woodward, and his right bower, Ed Nash, were "lining up the dips," shooing them into Mr. Eaton's reception room.

At 12:25 the simple procedure of opening a joint session commenced. A Presidential reception committee of Senators and Representatives was announced; when they left the chambers the Diplomatic Corps, to the accompaniment of polite applause, stepped briskly single file, arms swinging in awkward self-consciousness, to their front row seats. With scarcely a second's interval, to a round of heartier clapping, eight Cabinet members, led off by Secretary Marshall in a smart brown suit, marched down the aisle. Then, with everyone still standing, the President's cortege swung in.

President Truman, walking in the second row of eight accompanying legislators, carried himself more erect than ever, shook hands with aisle seat occupants without missing stride. He wore a cheerful blue suit, black and white shoes and had had a haircut since Philadelphia.

Without preamble he launched his speech, speaking with slight huskiness in an almost gentle conversational tone which contrasted oddly with his red hot, fist thumping, magnetic convention delivery.

President Speaks With Folksy Asides

THE President stuck to the text, at times appealing to the audience in a folksy way, mostly reading without wasting time on gestures or other oratorical tripperies. The Democrats, echoed by several enthusiasts in the gallery, applauded when he said emphatically, "We cannot afford to wait for Congress to act—every week of delay will mean additional hardship for the American people . . . we desperately need more housing . . . prices which families of moderate income, particularly veterans' families, can afford to pay. We are not getting it. . . This is a bill we need. We need it now, not a year from now . . . Congress should provide Federal assistance to the States in meeting the present crisis in education."

After the concluding words, "The American people rightfully expect us to meet it together. I hope that the American people will not look to us in vain," the clapping was almost enthusiastic. Then, accompanied by his top drawer bodyguards, the President disappeared up the aisle, shaking hands with the same swift skill. The buzz of conversation, accentuated by excellent acoustics, broke suddenly, in mounting waves.

During the speech Senators, Representatives, Cabinet members sat almost expressionless. Senator Barkley, sole possessor of an advance printed copy, followed the text closely, holding the paper close to his eyes. Across the aisle a Representative took voluminous notes—ammunition, no doubt, for tomorrow's barrage.

Senator Lodge's yellow tie stood out, Senator McGrath's superb suntan made his confreres look like sissies, two small boys in bright sport shirts shared a seat, someone's grandma was in another, Representatives stood three deep leaning over the back row; Massachusetts' Edith Rogers, who always wears a corsage at big events, turned up with an orchid while Ohio's Frances Bolton, apprehensive of air cooling, flung a white coat over shoulder; Senator Tydings was spotless as Phoebe Snow and Defense Secretary Forrestal's striped tie zipped up Cabinet sedateness.

In the Gallery

UP IN THE galleries leading diplomatic wife was Lady Franks, in black and white striped silk; shoulder to shoulder in the last row were Mrs. Tom Clark, the Attorney General's wife, in pretty green printed silk and white straw bonnet, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, whose dress was criss-crossed with rakishly angled palm trees. Mrs. Leslie Biffle, her pink hat swathed in tulle, hurried along while Mrs. George Mesta, her chin-strapped gaucho chapeau in place, leaned over the gallery rail. Mrs. Blair Childs, in sapphire blue shantung with a circle of flowers topping auburn hair, was escorted by Congressman Fulton. Mrs. Rowan Shevlin, cool as a spotted cucumber in black polka-dotted silk, added to her coolth by manipulating a tiny fan. Helen Gahagan Douglas, her assistant trotting one pace behind, raced along the corridor. Mrs. David Morse, wife of Assistant Secretary of Labor, in black and white print, shielded eyes, nose with a filmy veil. Bobby Burwell, Representative Eaton's grandson,

Summer Snow for Your Table

Snow in the summertime? Definitely yes, if it's fruit "snow," fluffy, feather-light dessert that is the perfect topping for a warm weather meal. A recipe for one type of fruit snow follows:

1 cup hot canned apricot nectar
6 tbsps. sugar
⅛ teasp. salt
¼ cup lemon juice
1 egg white

Soften gelatine in cold apricot nectar. Add hot apricot nectar, sugar and salt and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice. Pour ½ of the mixture into a large mold; chill. Chill the remaining mixture until slightly thicker than the consistency of unbeaten egg whites, whip until light. Beat egg white until stiff; add gelatine mixture. Place the bowl in ice water; continue to beat until mixture begins to hold its shape. Pour on top of stiffened gelatine and chill until firm. Unmold and serve with whipped cream or soft custard. Janis Carter looks as if she were enjoying her stroll on the beach. A check on her footprints in the sand would prove she has a beautiful walk. This Columbia star really enjoys exercise and her figure shows it.

By Ida Jean Kain

When you're walking along on the beach this summer, study your footprints in the wet sand. Try out different walks and from the tracks you'll see exactly how you step along. It's fun. Your footprints tell all about your walk . . . they can even give a clue to your age and tell whether you have shapely ankles.

First, notice how the steps are spaced . . . that is take note of the space between the inner borders of your feet, and from the toes of one foot to the heel of the other. Are the steps almost in a straight line? Then you have a nice walk. If the steps are spaced wide apart from each other, that is from side to side, that is evidence of a side-to-side walk, and an indication that you walk with the upper thighs too far apart instead of together.

If your toes are too close on the heel of your other foot, you are putting too much knee action into your walk . . . that's an old walk! Swinging your legs freely from the hips lengthens the stride, and of course the footprints.

We drag the ankles into this by the toes! If your footprints show toes pointed out, this reveals the great bone of the heel is rotated abnormally and your ankle muscles have thickened to stand up under your weight in that peculiar position. There is also a change in the position of the seven instep bones with the weight thrown to the inner borders of the feet, and the footprint will be heavier toward the inside of the foot. That is a weak position. Try to throw the weight to the outer borders of the foot, and watch the difference in the footprint. Practice of this is correction and exercise.

Now pick an unmarked stretch of hard beach, walk beautifully, and look back at the tracks . . . walk in almost a straight line, toes pointed straight ahead, upper legs close together, taking a comfortable stride, not too long, but not short or choppy. The footprints will be all neat and tidy in almost a straight line.

This is all in fun, but it does picture your walk . . . and points out the errors in one easy lesson. And walking in sand is wonderfully good foot and leg exercise, particularly if you walk in your bare feet.

When you're back in the city, think about those tracks as you walk along the avenue, and put one foot smartly ahead of the other, toes pointed straight forward, using a sort of free wheeling motion at the hips . . . see, walking is fun, and it can be beautiful.

Try this inexpensive beef heart done with a flair over charcoal or on wooden skewers under the broiler. Its pepper sauce is sharp and tangy to the palate.

Fish and shellfish combined with high seasonings fit into our easy-on-the-purse menus with succulence and ease in the Latin manner.

ANTICUCHOS

(Beef Heart)

1 beef heart
1 quart strong vinegar (about)
1 tablespoon salt
10 dried yellow peppers
Pinch of cumin seeds
2 tablespoons lard (about)
¾ cup bouillon (about)

Cut heart 1x2-inch. Place in bowl with vinegar and salt. Cover and allow to stand several hours, or overnight. Remove seeds from pepper. Put peppers through meat grinder with cumin. Saute in lard 5 to 10 minutes. Add enough bouillon to make thick sauce. Drain beef heart and place on wooden sticks, four pieces on one stick. Cook over a charcoal grill, turning frequently until cooked. Sprinkle with pepper sauce, using a brush made of husks Latin style, or with pastry brush. Approximate yield: 10 portions.

2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 clove garlic, diced

½ teaspoon dried marjoram
1 quart boiling water
2 cups uncooked corn kernels
¼ cup green peas
1 tablespoon uncooked rice
2 cups diced raw potatoes
3 tablespoons cottage cheese
2 dozen raw shrimp
Few pieces of fried fish
1 egg, beaten
1 quart milk
2 or 3 green olives
Poached eggs

Toast red pepper in large saucepan for a few minutes. Add butter, onion, garlic, tomato sauce, tomato, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper and marjoram. Saute 3 minutes. Add water, corn, peas, rice and potatoes. Cook slowly until vegetables are almost tender. Add cheese, shrimp and fish and remaining salt. Combine egg and milk and add slowly. Bring to a boil. Add olives. Serve over a poached egg in each serving plate. Yield: 3 quarts.

Catering to a Poor Appetite

If the youngster has a naturally poor appetite, be careful that he does not drink too much milk at the beginning of the meal, thus filling himself up so that he will not eat the other necessary foods. Sometimes it pays mother to "forget" the milk until the meal is well under way.

Ask Anne

My small grandson, due to my carelessness in not putting this pen out of his reach (I thought I had) has spilled some ink on a white leather desk chair seat. What will remove the stain and not the finish of the leather?
L. F. P.

It may not be possible to remove the stain completely, but you may be able to lighten it enough so it won't be conspicuous. Make a paste of cornstarch and water. Work this into the stain to take up ink and prevent it from spreading. Continue working the fresh paste into the stain, brushing it away as it becomes soiled and adding fresh until no more ink is absorbed. Then rub a little glycerine or liquid shampoo into the spot, working it in and wiping away suds as they become colored and applying fresh glycerine. Keep this up as long as ink is removed. If this doesn't take the spot off I'm afraid there is nothing else which can be done at home with safety to remove it. However, perhaps you could cover the entire seat with a plastic coating which is made just for leather. To reach a firm which sells this coating, call District 1130.

My sister and I plan to give a wedding breakfast for my nephew who is being married in August in a Southern town of about 60,000 population. The wedding will be an informal, late afternoon church ceremony, with the breakfast preceding it at noon. Since neither my sister nor I live in the town and will be there only for a few days at the time of the wedding, we will have to make arrangements largely by mail and will appreciate your suggestions on the following problems:

1. We are having the breakfast at a hotel or similar place and wonder if we would leave the matter of decorations up to the hotel or a local florist? It is possible we can select and arrange the flowers ourselves. Can you give us ideas as to table and other decorations?

It is doubtful that the hotel would be equipped to provide any decorations other than perhaps simple bouquets of flowers for the table. Therefore, if you have something more elaborate in mind, I would suggest you arrange to have a florist do it or buy the flowers and decorations, arranging them yourselves. For decorations, you could use numerous bowls of flowers and candles. The table bouquets could be arranged to resemble arm bouquets of flowers. To do this, use low bowls and short stemmed flowers. Place the flowers in a holder so that they resemble an arm bouquet. Then next to the bowl of flowers place a large bow of pale green ribbon. (Use florist's ribbon which is stiff enough to arrange prettily.) The streamers from the bouquet should be long enough to extend down the table away from the bouquet.

If the guests are seated at a long table, a nice arrangement would be two bouquets at the middle of the table with the streamers running away from them in opposite directions. Then, at each woman's place put tiny similar bouquets, using the same shade of green for the ribbons. If you are handy at such things, it is not difficult to fashion these little nosegays. (Use fine hairpins to hold the flowers together.) To add to the wedding-like appearance, you could use paper lace doilies back of the flowers. Place a boutonniere at each man's place.

2. Guests will include only the wedding party, immediate families and a few out-of-todn guests —perhaps 30 or 40 people in all. We would like to suggest the menu to the management. Can you give us a good one that would be especially suitable in August?

Here is a suggestion for a cool, summery menu carrying out a green-and-white color scheme:

Seedless grape and honeydew melon ball cocktail
Chicken mousse with mushroom sauce, or
Creamed chicken and mushrooms on hot baking powder biscuit
Buttered new peas
Hot biscuits
Lemon or lime sherbet
Tiny cup cakes Coffee.

3. Shall we mail invitations from our homes or wait and mail them in the city where the breakfast is to be held? The bride will furnish the guest list, of course. Since the wedding is informal, would informal notes suffice for the invitations since we are not acquainted personally with all the guests, or should we send engraved invitations?

The invitations should be mailed at least two weeks in advance of the party and could be mailed either from your home or the town where the wedding is to be. Informal notes would be a lovely, friendly way to invite the guests.

Can you advise me of a reliable method of sterilizing shoes? I had an advanced case of athlete's foot last summer and am fearful of it recurring if I wear the same shoes I did at the time of the infection. I. B.

A doctor at the Health Department tells me that if you will sponge the inside of the shoes with a formaldehyde solution, the fungus which causes athlete's foot will probably be killed. Use 1 teaspoon of formaldehyde to 1 quart of water and apply the solution generously to the inside with a sponge or absorbent cloth. As you know, a fungus is very difficult to kill so be sure to reach every spot with enough liquid to do the job, place in the open air and sun to dry. As an added precaution, always wear stocking when wearing these shoes.

About Ink Stain on Leather

HERE'S a pie in a brand-new summer dress, ready to grace the porch or lawn party. Aptly called "Chocolate Dream Pie," this dessert requires no cooking and has a most unusual crust. The filling is ice cream, topped with chocolate shavings

CHOCOLATE CREAM PIE

½ package (4 ounces) candy-making chocolate
4 cups corn flakes (1 2-3 cups, when coarsely crushed)
1-3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
7 tablespoons hot melted butter
1 quart vanilla ice cream

Chop or shave chocolate fine, reserving 1 to 2 tablespoons for garnish, if desired. Add crushed corn flakes and sugar and mix well. Then add butter and mix thoroughly. Uack on bottom and sides of 9-inchd pie plate. Chill in refrigerator 2 hours or longer. When ready to serve, pack firmly into pie shell and sprinkle with reserve chocolate. This recipe makes 6 to 8 servings.

About 10 years ago, my two young sons and I spent the winter in Palm Beach. We were on the beach a great deal and became interested in sea shells. I have several hundred of them but no one is interested in them in our family any more, so I thought perhaps one of your readers might like to have them, free of charge, of course. I must make it plain, however, that they are all of the variety found along the beaches near Palm Beach and very few are unusual. All are in good condition. Perhaps someone very interested in sea shells or who uses them to make ornaments will want them. J. A.

Any reader who would like to have J. A.'s shell collection may write her care this column, and the letter will be forwarded.

Poll Reveals Cancer Neglect Among Women

Among women between the ages of 35 and 55 cancer is the leading cause of death, yet when the Woman's Home Companion polled a national cross-section of its women readers, 87 per cent confessed that they had never been examined by a competent cancer specialist. In an article analyzing results of the poll in the August issue, the magazine points out that thousands of women might be saved if they would take advantage of already established cancer information and treatment.

Cancer in women, according to medical experience, is more likely than not to start in the breast or genital system and "so long as we don't go to a good doctor for a breast and pelvic examination every year we are in effect driving in the dark down a hazardous road."

"Neither prudery nor dread of verdict," the article adds, "should deter us in personally having periodic breast and pelvic examinations."

Even with the widespread knowledge that early diagnosis and prompt treatment are the only known methods for combating cancer, the Companion poll shows that almost half of the women quizzed do not have a periodic medical checkup. Out of the same group nearly three fifths do not have a pelvic examination and even more, two thirds do not have a breast examination.

From these statistics it appears that educated women are counting on Lady Luck to keep them free of cancer. Since luck is nothing to count on, the magazine outlines various methods of cancer control recommended by leading cancer specialists.

These methods range from a simple personal test that women can use to watch for cancer of the breast to an elaborate cancer-mobile—a completely equipped hospital car and staff—which is in use in Kentucky.

Of those who commented on their answers to poll questions 42 complained that their doctors were either too busy or too negligent to give them satisfactory examinations.

The article suggests that women in various communities—to combat these negative attitudes—might interest two or three physicians trained in gynecology to organize a cooperative cancer center such as the one established by Dr. Catherine Macfarlane at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

However complete the medical knowledge about cancer is, real progress will be made only when each woman assumes full responsibility for the dissemination and use of tihs knowledge.

Coat Is Worn Backwards

British Designers Unveil Alice in Wonderland Styles

By Geraldine Hill

London, July 27 (U.P.)—British designers crashed straight through the looking glass into Alice's wonderland today. They unveiled fall fashions featuring a coat worn backwards, collars shaped-like the mad hatter's ears, lorgnettes and epaulettes.

The Molyneux stable romped way up front in the fall fashion race with coats made of fabric outside and fur inside. Designer Charles Creed produced skirts which were plain in front and pleated in back.

Molyneux and Creed, a French-born couturier, gave buyers and the fashionably curious a peek into their worlds of style on the second day of Britain's fall and winter fashion week.

Creed showed 43 models. Some were decorated with chains, gold seals and jewels, instead of buttons. Molyneux exhibited a brown dress with buttons just about everywhere and no jewels.

The house of Molyneux, where the Duchess of Kent does most of her shopping, also produced bustles, low waistlines, pink satin gloves and a toreador hat, worn dead-center.

Creed models included huge topcoats with collars such as the famous highwayman wore when his steed clopped down the road. Some of Creed's models were more militant, however. Tailored suits were trimmed with gold leaf epaulettes, the war time insignia of the British lieutenant colonel.

Women wishing to rise higher in the fashion rank could have big silver stars like generals.

It was explained in detail that the backwards topcoat also can be worn facing forward, like any other coat. The rabbit-ear collar, with ears hanging down the back, was stitched to a checked topcoat. The lorgnettes came with dressy black town suits.

Molyneux, as usual, capitalized on the expensive accessories and trimmings which have won world-wide patronage.

Astrakan fur fabric, at $2 a yard, was used liberally on coat collars. Some cloth coats were lined with the stuff. Once in a while Molyneux used Persian lamb inside and cloth outside.

Many of the models were a radical departure from the "new look" as introduced in Paris last year. The hemline was about the only thing that remained untouched. It has been stabilized at an average of 13 inches from the ground.

was on hand to greet the crush of visitors to his grandfather's office.

Casual capital sightseers gave Portuguese Ambassador Pereira an admiring once-over, took a second took at Italy's handsomely leonine Ambassador Tarchiani, asked every one whether the Soviet Ambassador had showed up—he hadn't, and other satellite representatives were conspicuous by their absence.

All in all, the occasion was so grave, feelings had mounted so high, that the elation underlying almost every extraordinary event was completely lacking. President Truman, regardless of political opinion, did a good, unsensational job on his speech, made a dignified unemotional impression. Tomorrow let fur fly where it may—and probably will.

Auxiliary Presidents Plan Dinner Thursday

The past presidents of the D. C. American Legion Auxiliary will hold its parley and annual pre-convention dinner Thursday at 7 o'clock in the Hamilton Hotel.

Chairmaning the affair, which will include a short program prior to the parley, is Mrs. Eva B. Carrico. Miss Mabel Staub is department parley chairman and Mrs. Pearl Heagerty, secretary and treasurer. For reservations, telephone Mrs. Marie Totten, Atlantic 7493.

Sun Bathing Can Endanger Your Health

Sun bathing can be downright dangerous.

The risks you run for the sake of acquiring that popular saddle-brown look, according to medical experts whose opinions are set forth in "The Truth About Suntan," in the July 31 issue of Saturday Evening Post, range from increased hair-growth on arms and legs, to skin cancer and even death in the case of a deep-enough sunburn over a large enough area.

The sun has health-giving qualities, and medicine has used it to treat wounds and some types of tuberculosis, Arthur J. C. Furnas says in the Post article. But if you get enough vitamin D in your diet, you need never encounter the sun to be perfectly healthy. Mr. Furnas warns that:

Direct sun ages the skin.

Too much of it can cause permanent skin blotches.

The degree of risk increases from dark brunettes to light brunettes to blondes to redheads.

Salt water spray steps up the burning process.

Daily hatlessness does more damage than a two-week vacation spent on the beach.

To reduce the risks of over-exposure to the sun, Mr. Furnas advises:

Take it easy; 15 minutes is enough on the first visit to the beach.

Suntan oils, creams and lotions help to filter out the dangerous ultraviolet rays.

Efficient hat protection is essential for fair persons and those who know their skins are sensitive.

Wear dark glasses in bright sunlight, particularly when physical surroundings are well-adapted to reflect the intense blaze from below, as on white sand or snow or water.

Call me Fussy!

Until the law lets me have margarine colored in the churn it's made in,* I'll stick to

NUCOA'S "Bowl Mix"

It's the best way

1 Because it protects the fine flavor and texture that make Nucoa our favorite margarine!

You're right, lady! We tolerate no short-cuts on quality in the making of Nucoa, so why should you tolerate them in coloring Nucoa for your table? Nucoa is churned, chilled, made into pounds, and luxuriously triple-wrapped, so that it comes to you with the finest churn-fresh flavor, the smoothest churn-fresh texture any spread can have. It is not melted and poured into any trick coloring package, because we know you would not like the flavor and texture of delicious Nucoa impaired in this way.

2 Because it's as quick as any way—and so much more appetizing!

Yes, lady! Just let Nucoa stand at room temperature until it is soft—not soupy, but soft enough for quick sandwich spreading. Then remove it from the package to a large bowl and with a large fork or spoon cream in the coloring shaken from the pure color wafer. It takes less than a minute and a half to mix the color in evenly —and no other method is quicker than this; no other method so well protects the texture!

3 Because I get the best margarine this way—at less cost!

Right again! If you buy margarine in a trick coloring package, you pay extra for the package. When you buy Nucoa, you buy its finer flavor, its year-round, churn-fresh goodness, its rich food energy and dependable Vitamin A. You get the margarine you're proudest to put on your table—actually cheaper! What could be better?

* Obtainable yellow (where not prohibited by state law) at higher cost, to cover high Federal taxes and license fees.

ONE of the finest examples of Georgian architecture, Woodlawn, will be auctioned on July 31. Visitors took a last look around the house and lawns Sunday. The 20-room mansion is flanked by a formal boxwood garden to the north and clumps of boxwood to the front and rear. The Woodlawn acres, now owned by Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, wife of the late Alabama Senator, were originally a gift of George Washington to Nellie Custis

Woodlawn, Nellie Custis' Home, to Be Sold

By Dorothea Andrews

"I have never wanted wealth, but when you see something like this——"

The speaker was a middle-aged woman. From where she sat on the veranda at Woodlawn (open to the public last Sunday) she could look out over green acres stretching to the Potomac River.

If she turned and went into the house, she would first see a graceful, suspended stairway in a cool center hall. To right and left are well proportioned rooms, waiting, it seems, for someone to live graciously and serenely there.

The spirit of the house seemed to infect the hundreds of persons who visited it and looked at the furnishings, which will be sold at public auction on Saturday.

School Is Proposed

Most of the visitors knew that the Fairfax Circuit Court has been petitioned to authorize sale of the property to the Immaculate Heart of Mary Mission Society, Inc. The society wants to establish a boys' preparatory school there.

One after another shook his head and muttered, "If I only had the money to buy this place. It seems such a pity to change it into a school."

The charm of Woodlawn is deep-rooted in American history. Now the property of Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, widow of the late Alabama Senator, the Woodlawn acres came into being as a gift from George Washington to Nellie Custis.

The original tract of land, 2000 acres of it, extended nearly into Alexandria. The house itself is built on a knoll which overlooks both Route 1 and the Potomac River, and is approximately a mile north of Fort Belvoir.

Nellie Custis and her husband, Lawrence Lewis, a Revolutionary War soldier, built the house in the early 1800s after designs believed to have been made by Dr. William Thornton, architect of the Washington Octagon House and one of the designers of the Capitol.

After Lewis' death Nellie Custis went to live at Audley, near Berryville, Va., where she died in 1852. Woodlawn suffered from neglect. A historian reports it presented a "sad and desolate appearance" for a number of years.

Shortly before the Civil War it was purchased by a colony of Quakers from New Jersey and Pennsylvania, who restored the property and cultivated its farms. Little is known of the estate again until it was purchased in 1925 by the Underwoods from the estate of Elizabeth M. Sharpe.

Senator Underwood died in 1929 and Mrs. Underwood has been ill in Philadelphia since 1943. The estate has now dwindled to 127 acres, much of it farmland.

The auction, which is to be held next Saturday by the guardians of next Saturday by the trustees of Mrs. Underwood's possessions. There is nothing left in the house now which belonged to Nellie Custis or her husband.

The house itself, one of the finest examples of Georgian architecture in America, is flanked by a formal boxwood garden to the north and clumps of boxwood to the front and rear of the 20-room mansion. Magnolia trees, oaks and elms stretch out in verdant vistas to the south of the house.

Those who attend the auction, which starts Saturday morning at 10:30, will see—perhaps for the last time—Woodlawn as a country estate in the best American tradition. They will also look at household belongings of Mrs. Underwood, assessed at $15,000, and including everything from a sedan chair converted into a curio cabinet to a vacuum cleaner. It also includes Spode china and crystal ware.

MRS. UNDERWOOD'S spode china and crystalware and other household belongings will go at the auction Saturday. None of Nellie Custis' original possessions are left in the house. Woodlawn was built by Nellie Custis and her husband, Lawrence Lewis, in the early 1800's after designs believed made by Dr. William Thornton

Mother's Goodby Attitude May Bring on Tears

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The attitude a mother displays when she says goodby to her child, casually for an afternoon, or for some lengthier period, has much to do with the way the child accepts her departure.

If the mother slips away, as if she were committing some crime, it is certain the baby will begin to feel that he is mistreated. He will be suspicious if she leaves the room that she will depart for longer. He has no faith in her, because she has outwitted him on occasion.

There is no good reason, why a goodby should not be part of a child's daily experiences. He gets used to saying goodby to his father and waving after him, why should his relations with his mother be of a different type? If the mother allows herself to be persuaded to stay home, because the child cries a little when she leaves him, she become a martyr to him and he a tyrant who cannot be left with anyone. This is unnatural and also dangerous. No one knows when the moment may arrive when a child will have to accept the ministrations of someone other than the mother. The time to get him used to that is early in infancy.

Let the parent make a sweet ceremony of saying goodby. Let her tell the child that she will be back. Time passes quickly and even though his face may pucker as she goes out of the door, if her farewell has been a happy one his emotions will soon evaporate and he will be contented until she returns.

Every act of every day is a preparation for living. Separation is part of living and the child should experience it, accept it and learn not to be unhappy about it.

Sometimes, unfortunately, mothers while appearing to be martyrs are secretly flattered at their children's preference for their company and their demands for their presence. This secret emotion should appall her. The mother who feeds her vanity upon a child's dependence upon her, has failed, like Peter Pan, to achieve adult stature. A grown-up acknowledges the rightness of building a child's independence, even in the early years when all it means is that a child can smile and not cry when his mother waved goodby.

Col. Williams Is Host At Greenbrier Hotel

Col. Wallace H. Williams, United States Air Force Technical Adviser to the Turkish Air Mission, has arrived in this country from Ankara and is at the Greenbrier Hotel at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. He has as his guests Lieut. Gen. Zeki Dogan, commanding general of the Turkish air force, who is recuperating from a recent illness; Col. Muhtar Davaz, surgeon general of the Turkish air force, and Col. Tekin Ariburun, Military and Naval Air Attache of the Turkish Embassy in Washington.

On the Town

THE Casino Royal has succeeded in booking a good follow-up show to match the entertainment value of their last one. It's topped off by a very young M. C. named Stanley Kayne. Stanley is 21 years old and looks all of about 19. His chatter is amusing and he handles himself well enough to make one know that this is not his first job, or second, or third, for that matter, in show business. His mainstay in the humor line is an act in which he does a pantomine to a recording that's played in the background. In this he is letter-perfect right down to the last flip of the tongue and twitch of the cheek. The only drawback is that this stuff has been done by many a comic before and has begun to pall a bit. Stanley looks like a smart enough boy to shift his material and come up with something new for the paying customers.

Lester

Harriet Lane comes through at the Casino with what was planned as a slightly exotic rendition of an acrobatic dance. What with slow movement and half-closed eyes she had the fellows looking out of the corners of their eyes as only men can and the girls wondering what they could do about changing the color of said boys' eyes. A little more acrobatics pullease!

Jack and Marilyn Nagle are about the most wholesome dance team we've seen in many a moon. None of this slinky look and greased hair stuff for this team. The applause they got was strictly because their taps weren't mixed up with a bunch of other stuff. They do a good job on the dancing and actually look as though they enjoy the whole thing without having to plaster on that stage style most of them develop after a time. Youth and enthusiasm is a thing that you seldom realize you miss until it walks on the floor in front of you.

NOW with your kind permission we're going to editorialize on a situation that has annoyed us and a lot of other people for some time. It's the subject of floor show commercials.

After a comedian or a singer has come through with a good job of entertaining and the show is about to wind up the poor character is forced by the guy that signs the checks to recite (and it's just that) a little commercial informing the paying customers that they can have parties there, or that dinner is so much on certain days. All this may be very well on radio where you don't have to pay for that 15 minutes of "Life in Helen's Tent" or "Road of Strife." It is not only lowers the comic or entertainer in the eyes of the audience, after he's done a good job of getting a laugh, but it lowers the tone of the spot. Also it's quite a blow to some of the talent to have to make like an announcer after having worked on a routine for some weeks or months to get it just right. Chances are 99 to 1 that you never heard Jackie Miles, Buddy Lester or any of the other top talent do it.

Who knows, in a few years you may be privileged to listen to a comic extol the wonders of your favorite beer between jokes. We believe that the customers would take kindly to a little change of this policy.

NEW YORK—The Harry Hopkins-Bob Sherwood series in Collier's was contracted for by Tom Beck more than seven years ago. It was to take effect as soon as Hopkins retired from public life. Mr. Beck's first business deal with Hopkins was for an article in the American Magazine, called "Hitler Can't Win." Hopkins asked him how much he'd get. "If it's no good, we'll pay you $1000," Beck told him. "If it's fair, $3000. If it's very good, $5000." Beck proposed this graduating scale in the hope that it would induce Hopkins to pull no punches, and it worked. Beck paid him $5000. The final draft of "Hitler Can't Win" was examined and corrected by Roosevelt himself.

Victor Reuther, brother of Walter Reuther, sails for Europe to represent the CIO at the labor conference to foster the Marshall Plan . . . The efforts to unite the comic book industry in a combined attempt to halt the threatened censorship have been to no avail. The Superman Co., incidentally, will start a Nationwide advertising campaign this fall, with full-page ads in papers and magazines to stress the clean and uplifting character of Superman . . . Boris Todrin, the correspondent and author of the forthcoming "The Plundered Heart," was wounded by Arab mortar fire in Jerusalem. He was hit during the "truce."

Robert Coates' new novel, "Wisteria Cottage," will be a psychological study of a murder. It is unrelated, however, to the Albert Fish murder of Grace Budd in a lonely house actually called "Wisteria Cottage" . . . The American Artists Group has brought suit against Hallmark to enjoin them from using the name "Gallery Artists Group" . . . Waldo Frank is writing a biography of Simon Bolivar, the South American liberator. He'll spend a year traveling over the route taken by Bolivar . . . Galli-Curci and her husband have retired to a ranchhouse outside of San Diego. The famed Metropolitan Opera star no longer sings, but spends her time painting.

Oscar Chapman, the Undersecretary of the Interior, recently saw Ed Kelly, the Chicago political leader, and thanked him for producing large crowds when Truman visited Chicago. Chapman was one of the advance men on Truman's "nonpolitical" tour . . . "I hope that the crowds who turned out to see Truman also will vote for him," said Chapman . . . "They'll vote for him," Kelly assured him. "When people take time off to look at a political candidate, it means they're interested in him, and will vote for him. They never go to see a guy they're not rooting for. Take me. I never look at a Republican unless I can't help it."

John Van Druten will direct the new Gertrude Lawrence play . . . Harnett Kane has had his next book bought by two book clubs, assuring him of an advance sales of at least 650,000 copies. It's a novel about Mrs. Jefferson Davis, wife of the President of the Confederacy. It was to be called "The President's Wife," but it was changed to "Bride of Fortune," lest readers think it's about Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Truman or Mrs. Dewey . . . Louis Marx, the American industrialist, is on his way to Moscow. His trip was okayed by the Russian government because it's a personal visit to his friend, Ambassador Smith.

Ida Shurman, who is listed as a composer in "Who's Who in the East," has had her first song published. It's called "The Scarecrow Man."

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Roughing or Reading?

Longfellow called it "The Children's Hour"—that time just before the younger members of the household are sent off to bed. It is an important time—a time when there may be some very pleasant give and take between parents and children, or when there will be fussing, nagging and general all-around irritation.

Most people feel that quiet activity is best, that it will not stir up children so much that they won't go to sleep easily. Reading or telling stories, singing together, talking with Dad and Mother about what has happened during the day or just looking at magazines or books are among the things most often advised.

Yet children differ and so do parents. It may be that in some families, the thing that will be most enjoyed, that will give Dad and the youngsters a chance to feel close together, is a good romp. Provided he is still strong enough after the day's work, Dad may be a "bucking bronco" or a "ferocious bear."

If youngsters are overstimulated by such active play and are restless after they go to bed, one has a clear sign that more quiet activities are in order. But the matter should be decided in light of the facts, not according to some general principles.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Progress Noted in Race Relations

By Drew Pearson

A lot of my Southern friends have been telling me I should be awfully careful how I discuss the current political rebellion below the Mason-Dixon line. Undoubtedly they are right. But, since so many people are already sore because of my nose poking into all sorts of things, from the high cost of ambassadorships to Secretary of the Treasury Snyder's bibulousness at the President's birthday dinner, I suppose it won't hurt to get a few more people sore. So here goes.

Stalin

One thing I can't help thinking about the civil rights row is that the boy who is getting most satisfaction out of it all is Joe Stalin.

I also can't help thinking that a time when we are very much on the spot in Berlin is a time when we ought to be preserving a reasonably united front back home.

What the Russians Forget

The Russians, of course, don't know—or care—that all things are relative and that we've made a lot of progress in this country. It was only as recently as the 1919-20 postwar period that a horrible massacre of Negroes occurred in East St. Louis, while disgraceful race riots took place even in the Nation's Capital. The present postwar period has been largely free from such violence.

And on the same night Birmingham was staging its rebellion, Satchell Paige, Negro pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, pitched against the Washington Senators in the Nation's Capital and a white batter who tried to unnerve him was booed.

I remember also the great furor created when Oscar de Priest, Republican Negro Congressman, was invited to a White House tea in the Hoover Administration. The Republicans were supposed to be the champions of the Negro, but so many of them protested and Mr. Hoover got so worried, that Congressman De Priest discreetly stayed away.

In recent Democratic Administrations, two Negroes have served consistently in Congress, both Democrats; and Representative Dawson of Chicago has informed me that his colleagues from the South have treated him with respect and courtesy. There has been no protest when Negro Congressmen were invited to recent White House receptions.

And today in Georgia, a Negro is running for the United States Senate against Senator Dick Russell and is free to campaign where he pleases throughout the State.

These are things the Soviet propagandists will not mention.

The South's Real Leaders

They also will not mention—and a lot of people have forgotten—that Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the man now leading the Dixiecrat revolt, is the same Governor Thurmond who got a lot of his own Southern white friends boiling mad when he insisted on tryng some taxidrivers for lynching a Negro near Greenville, S. C.

Local sentiment was violently against Governor Thurmond, but he insisted that the men charged with lynching be prosecuted—which they were.

There are a lot of Southerners honestly working for fair play in the South. Only they don't like to have reforms rammed down their throats by outsiders. Ellis Arnall, when Governor of Georgia, had no trouble getting Georgia to abolish the poll tax. Most Georgians took pride in this, though currently a lot of them have their backs up and if the poll-tax issue came along today they would vote the other way.

Erasing Mason-Dixon Line

The other day I met a man who has been doing his part at better understanding between the North and the South—a genteman named Champ Pickens of Montgomery, Ala., who has organized the Blue and Gray Association. He is trying to get folks who followed the Confederate Gray during the Civil War, and those who followed the Federal Blue to get together at least once a year at a football game between the all-star team of the North and the all-star team of the South. He stages the game at Montgomery, cradle of the Confederacy, and as many Northern folks as possible are invited down to see the game.

Perhaps it might be a good idea for us to stage a lot of things like this—and to think a little bit more about our own internal problems.

For instance, most people don't realize that there is no one memorial day to commemorate the veterans who wore the blue and the gray. Memorial days are sprinkled all over the calendar. While the North sets aside May 30, North and South Carolina set aside May 10, Louisiana, Tennessee, and Kentucky June 3, while Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, and Alabama commemorate April 26.

Therefore, why not pick one day mutually agreeable.

Also, it might be a fine idea for the Rotary clubs, the Kiwanis and Llons clubs, and the Junior Chambers of Commerce which all do such a good job of promoting worthwhile community enterprises, to take up the problem of better understanding between the North and South. If some of the Southern clubs invited Northern clubs down to their cities, and vice versa, a lot of solid friendship might result.
